Seniors Debi MacDonald and Jenifer Beckman take a break from the strenuous work of building the Senior float.

A Changing Class Act

The curtain rose on the school year when September 4 put an end to an unusually long summer. New state laws had given FHS students an extra two weeks of freedom. Students returned to find a new principal, Mr. Charles Leverett, nine new teachers, and a new counselor. New faces weren't the only thing different at FHS. To the relief of most, there were no more computer cards, but to their disappointment, there was a different school year schedule. Students now had to take finals after Christmas and didn't get out until June 11.

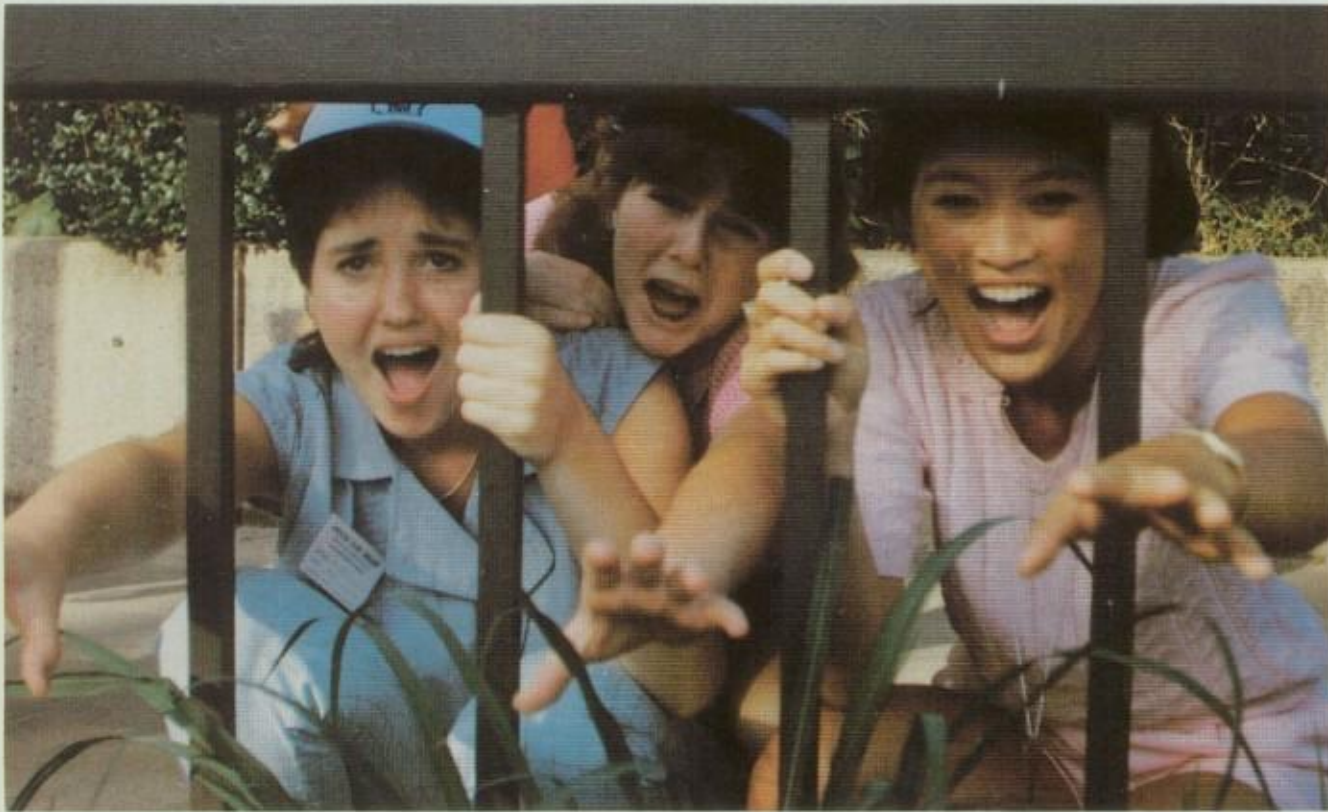

Not only were things changing at school, they were changing in the world as a whole. 1984 was a year of Presidential elections and Olympics. Both were out of the ordinary. For the first time in history a woman was picked as a Vice-presidential candidate. The Olympics were marked by the Soviet Bloc's boycott of the summer games in Los Angeles. And women also made historic trips into space.

While things were changing here at home and throughout the world, some things stayed the same. The sophomore's first day anxiety and the subsequent amusement of the juniors and seniors were familiar feelings. The same old questions of "How'd your summer go?" and "How long 'til Christmas vacation?" were shouted through the halls. All the students, whether old or new, were actors in an old, on going, sometimes changing play ...

The FHS Band "jams down" at the indoor pep rally for the game against Fort Smith's Southside.

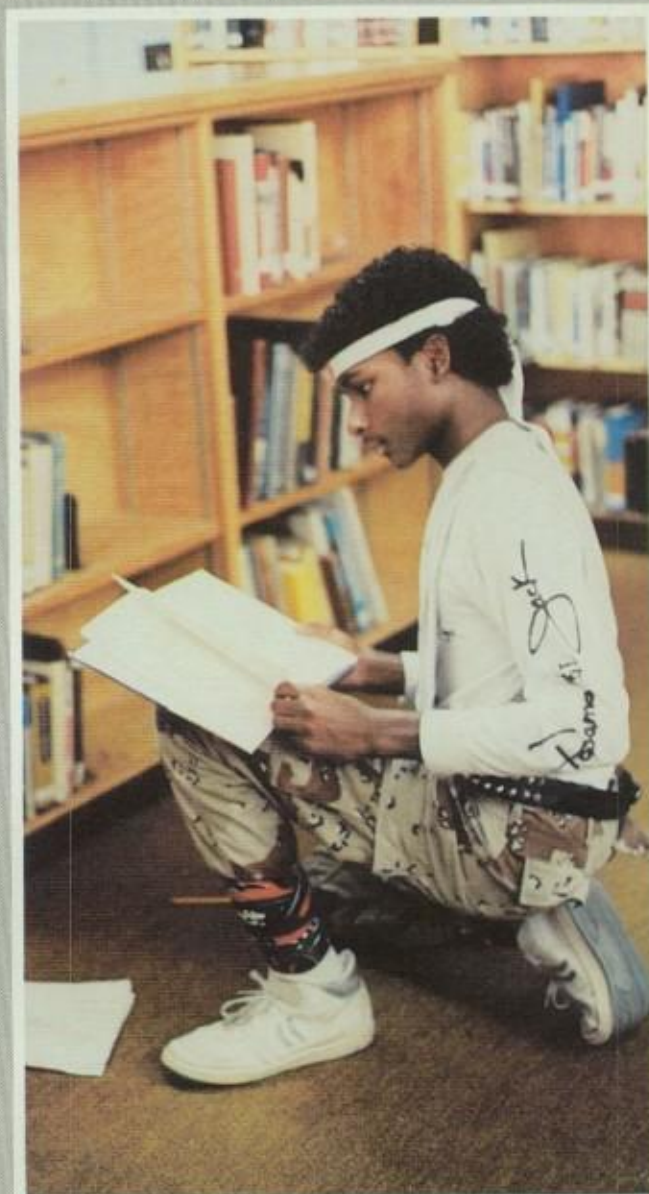

Many enjoyed the unusually warm October weather, as did Junior Karin Bolinger and Senior Dena Fitts. (Sometimes known as 'T' and 'Gus'.)

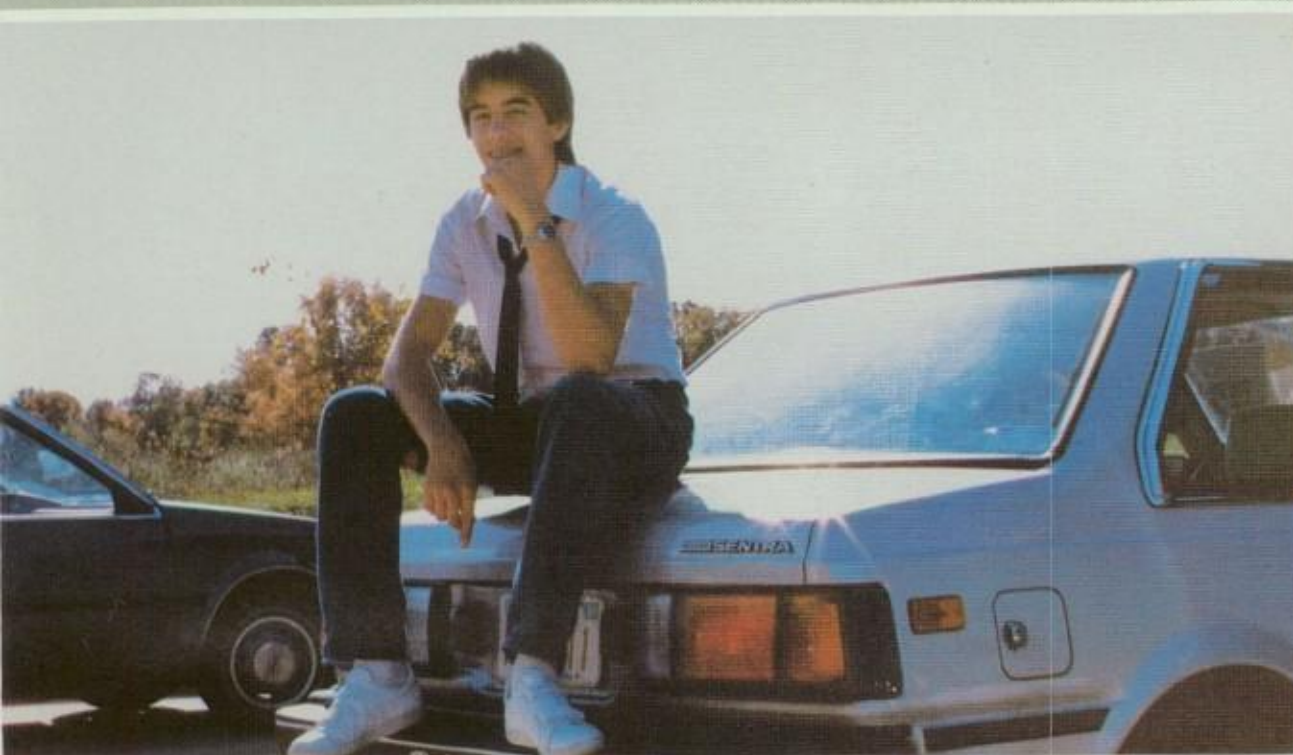

While partying and having fun are a big part of student life, unfortunately so is studying and Sophomore James Arwood does his share of it.

Sophomore Carl McCrary takes time out from break-dancing to catch up on his studies in the library.

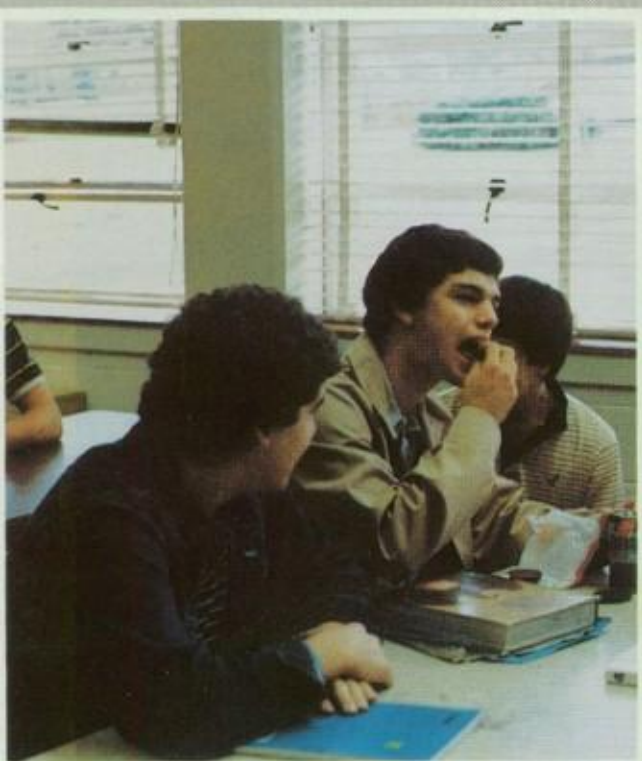

Senior Ron Meurer reflects upon his past weekend — it makes you wonder what he has planned for next weekend.

Student Life

"These are the best years of your life." How many times have you heard that line? Well, we here at Fayetteville High heard it so often, we decided it must be true. So we did our best to live up to that statement. If it took partying all night, dating that special person, or cutting class to make it true, we made the sacrifice. Whether we studied, partied, dated, or all of the above, we made sure our act was ...

Hot, Hazy Summer

"The summer was terrific," commented Heidi Letzkus. "It was the first summer I could drive and the extra two weeks made it that much better." Like Heidi, many F.H.S. students were busy enjoying their three months of freedom.

Going to the lake was a popular activity. It was a great place to get a tan and when the temperature hit the 90's, it was a better place to cool off.

For those looking for adventure during the summer, there was the science trip to Yosemite National Park or a trip to Mexico with the Archaeology Club.

For those who didn't get out of Fayetteville, summer was a great time to catch up on sleep or find out who was having an affair with whom on a favorite soap opera.

Summer was one of the best times to get a job, to earn money for buying that first car or spending money during the school year. Many students kept their job even after school started.

But all too soon football and band practice had started. The next thing we knew, we were sitting in our first period class and a new school year had begun here at Fayetteville High School.

Big rides and bright lights are always favorites at the fair.

Midnight Madness

Close your eyes. Now imagine this combination; the smell of candied apples, closely confined animals, mobs of people. Now add the squeaks and groans of carnival rides plus yelling carneys and what have you got? The fair! Add a little bit of wet drizzle and you've got the 1984 Washington County Fair.

County Fair time was a lot of fun for a lot of folks. It gave everyone a chance to show off their best, be it artwork, pies, or that special cow.

FFA did very well at the fair. The livestock judging team, consisting of Kim Arthur, Terri Arthur, Leslie Morelock, and Debbie Hays, won first place. Terri Arthur had the grand champion market lamb. Other members of FFA also did well.

The most memorable part of the fair has always been the rides. Whether you chose the romantic ferris wheel, or to get your ears blown out on the Himalaya, or the scrambler, there's something for everyone!

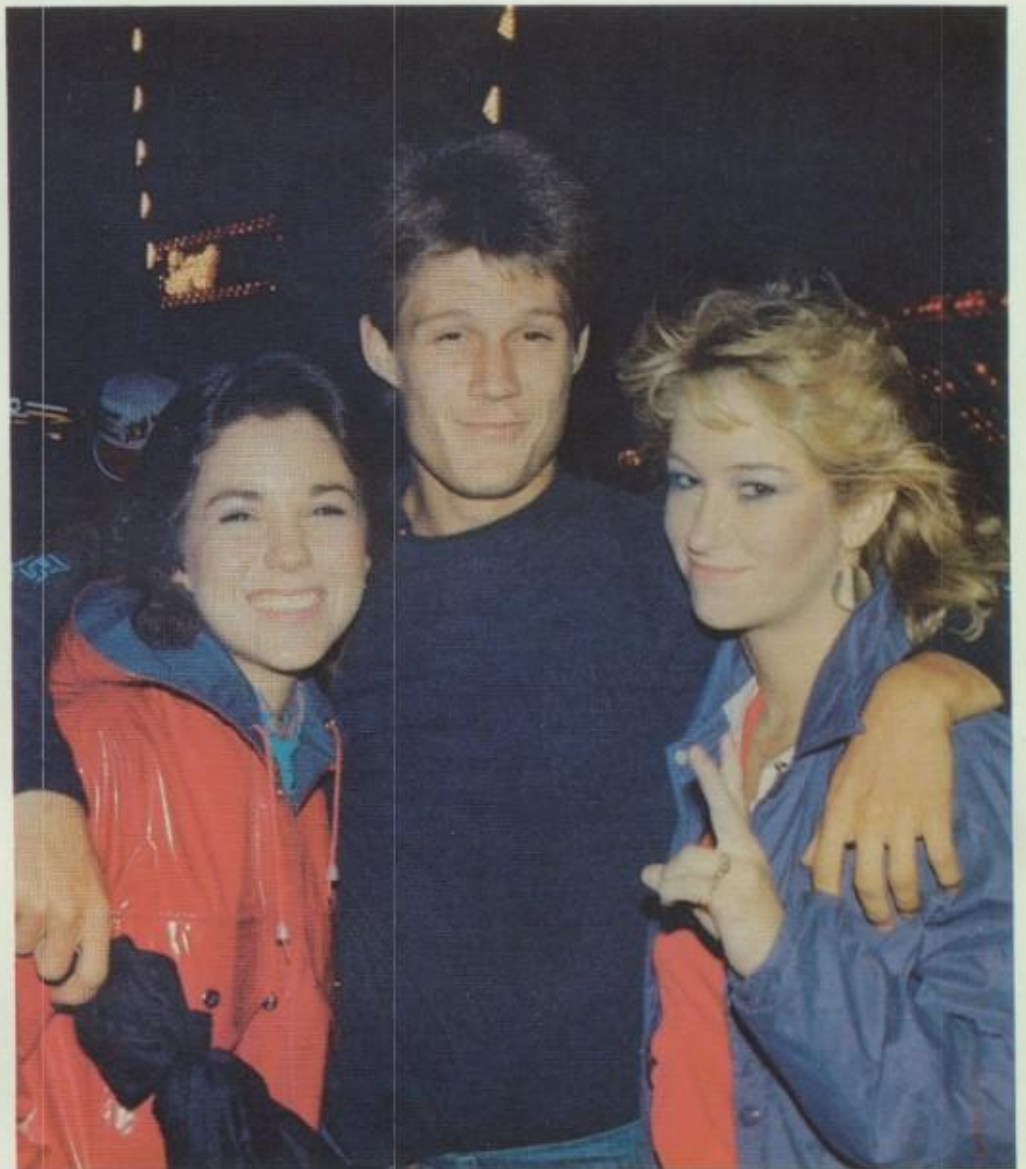

Clint Blew was a little surprised to find out he had to pay to get in this year's fair.

Most people go to the fair to have fun and be with friends like Andi Albert and Cindy Jeffery.

Braving the rain Karen Renegar, Jeff Ticich, and Shari Vickers see the sights at the fair.

If you're lucky, like Craig Luttrell and friends, you might win your fall wardrobe at the fair.

Drum majors Vikki Peters and Amy Fairchild lead the band in the Autumnfest parade.

The Juniors won the float contest with "Roast Russellville" as their theme.

At last these drill teamers find their true ambition — as new recruits for the Elkins Volunteer Fire Department.

These seniors enjoy getting a 'hand in' on float activities.

Rain On Our Parade

When Homecoming day rolled in this year, so did the rain clouds; and for the first time in FHS history, the Homecoming Parade had to be cancelled. No clowns, floats, or the queen and her court in lush convertibles — Instead there were only rain soaked streamers, and an empty platform meant for the seniors of the football team.

The organizers, would be participants, and spectators alike were all disappointed to hear the announcement of the cancellation. Anger and frustration were expressed by many who had spent so much of their time during the week on preparations for the parade.

"Even though there was no parade, I thought Coach Johnson and the Student Council had the parade organized extremely well, and I thought that Dr. Russell called it off prematurely," commented senior Sandy Thompson, "I was upset for the court and especially the seniors."

It wasn't all bad, however. Many of the attractions usually found in our parade, including the court and escorts, the juniors' float, the spirit groups, and the band participated in the Autumnfest Parade on October 13, also held on the Square.

Keeping The Finest Tradition: Homecoming!

Excitement started Monday at 7:30 when the senior football players voted for the 1984-85 Homecoming Court. Later that day the school assembled in the gym and the Homecoming Court was announced. First named was Third Maid Kim Kaylor who was escorted by Brad Lewis and Calvin Sharp, Second Maid was Cathy Robertson escorted by Spencer Armstrong and Steve Roth, First Maid was Missy Morris escorted by Marvin Singleton and Hoyt Perry, Maid of Honor was JoAnn Latrecchia escorted by Jeff Grube and Neil Shipley, and the 1984-85 Queen was Isabel Zalles escorted by Mike Rogers and John Branch.

All through the week excitement grew, with big plans for Friday! All three classes worked hard on their floats for the big parade. Unfortunately, heavy afternoon rains fell, and for the first time in Fayetteville's history the Homecoming parade was cancelled. However, at game time the rain held off and the crowning ceremony was held at half time of the Fayetteville-Russellville game. The escorts at the game for third maid were Clint Blew and Steve Finney, for second maid were Tracy Turpin and David Wall, for first maid were Leonard Albright and Mike Morris, for maid of honor were Tom Terminella and Tommy Jenkins, and for the queen were Kevin O'Connell and Sandy Thompson. The crown-bearers were Andrew Pitts and Whitney Dill.

As expected, the Bulldogs blew away the Cyclones 28-0. This victory put the Bulldogs third in the state with the record of 6-0. After the victory, 26 Club sponsored the traditional Homecoming Dance ("Purple Reign") in the cafeteria. All in all, Homecoming 1984-85 ended on a high note.

Weekends . . . FHS Style

Weekends at Fayetteville High were spent in many different ways, but if you were lucky you spent your weekends having fun! Then again if you weren't so lucky, Friday and/or Saturday nights were spent behind a counter with the words, "May I help you?" echoing in your head.

Although work on the weekends wasn't restricted to nighttime, anytime at work instead of play was considered a wasted time to many. But others managed to find a bit of joy in making money that was to be spent the second they were set free from the working grindstone. Asking Amy Jones what work was like on a weekend: "I looked forward to Monday so I could hear what I missed. But it did keep me out of trouble! Sometimes."

Those who were set free with the car keys and a never ending pocket full of money, could always be found looking for someone to yell, "Let's party!!" Mike Morris gave a good example of, "life in the fast lane," when he told how his Friday nights were spent. "I went for pre-game at a friends house, went and munched out, went to the games, then out for post-game activities."

No matter whether you were working or partying on weekends, those two days away from the homework and early morning classes were ones we remember fondly.

Getting Around Town

As with the beginning of every new year, a new group of vehicles filled the FHS parking lots. You could usually find all shapes, sizes, makes, and colors on any day during the year.

One thing certain was that having a ride was great! That was why all the sophomores anxiously awaited their sixteenth birthday. They came with their birthday cars the day they turned sixteen, some before.

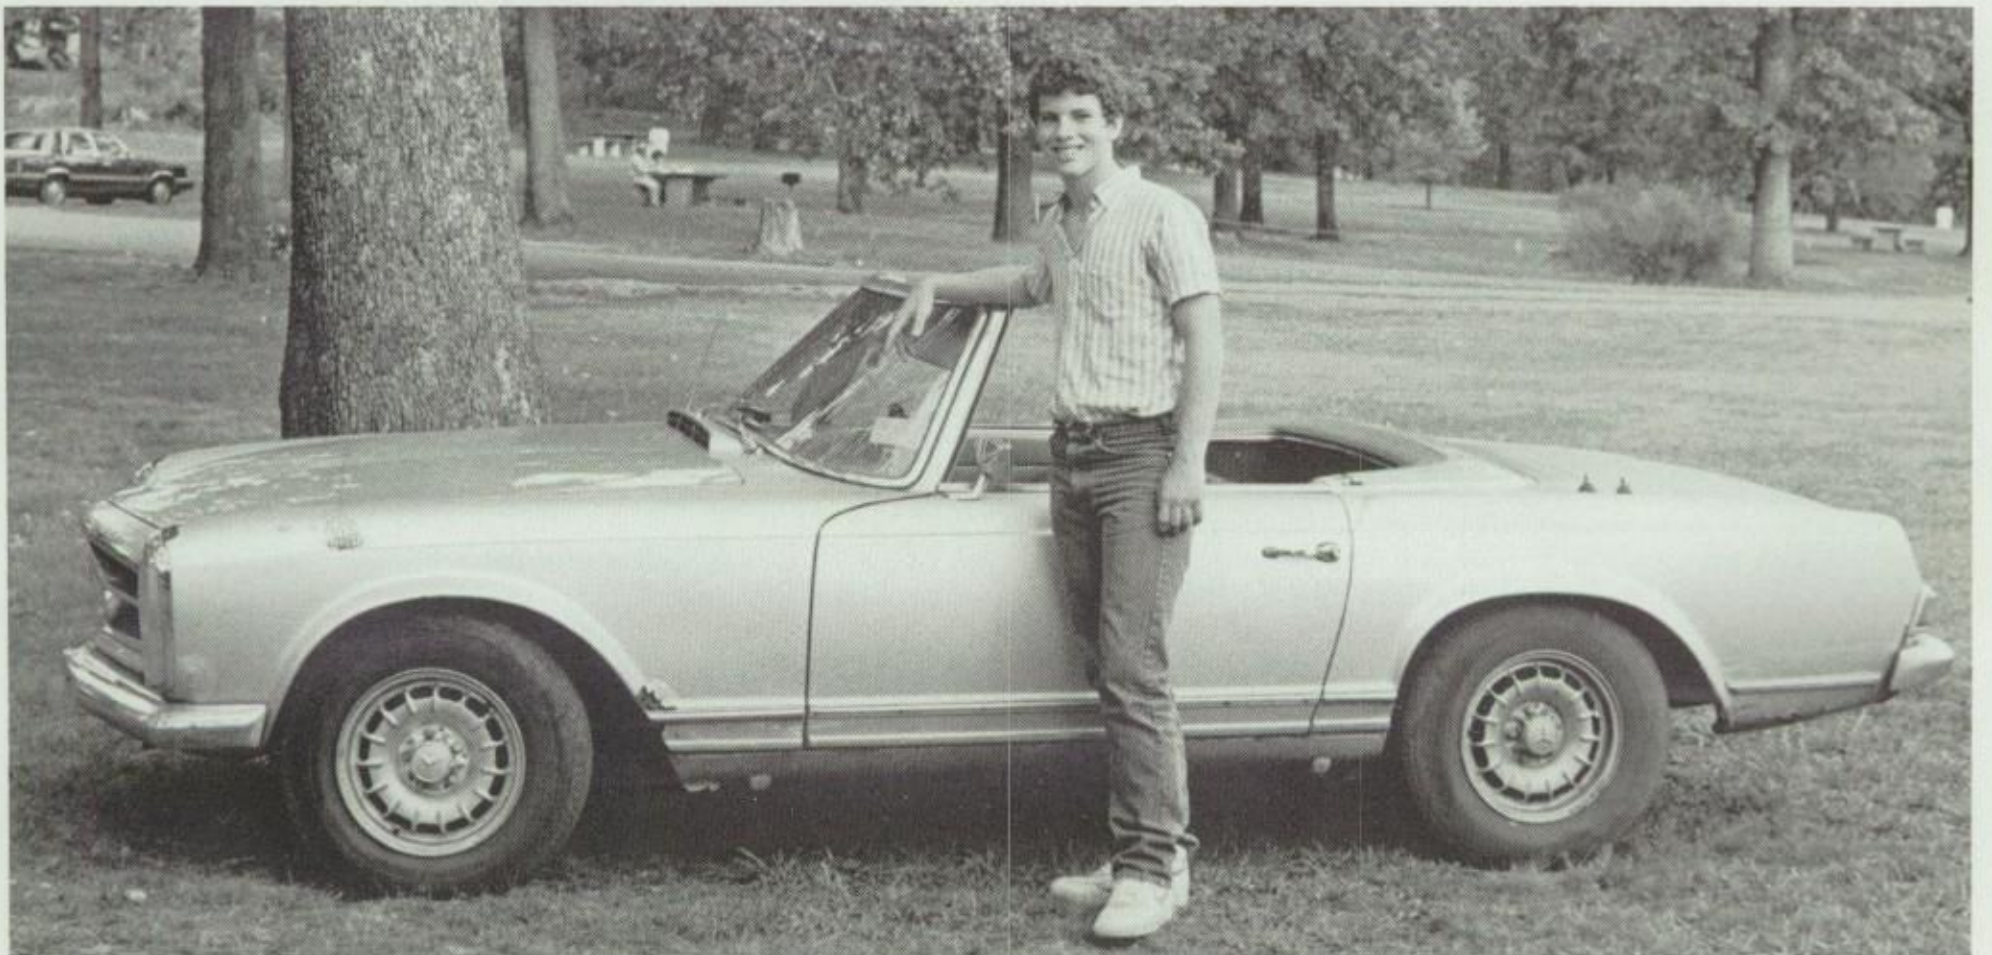

The seniors were on the opposite end of the spectrum. They all fought over places in the senior lot so they didn't have to park with the underclassmen. They didn't want "dings" in their car doors or vase-line under their door handles, a favorite sophomore prank.

But what about gas money? That's where bikes and motorcycles came into the picture. Some students would rather not pay the fortune it costs to upkeep a car or to supply it with gas. For those who didn't want to spend any money, the bus was available.

However you got to school, the main thing was that you got to school. You did get to school, didn't you?

In case you've wondered, this is the way Lasse goes home.

This year, as always, convertibles were big — ask Richard Rogers.

Richey Miller leans against one of the newest additions to his vehicle collection — a Toyota truck.

Ricky Harris trucks Coke and other edible delights around Dillon's to earn his paycheck.

Out To Make The Bucks

Everyone needed money during the school year — for graduation, tickets to the prom, class rings, gas for the car, dates etc . . . Reasons for needing money varied, but where did you get that money? For many students, it meant getting a job, and they found them in some very diverse places.

There were students who manned the counters of McDonald's, Burger King, and Taco John's. Others bused tables at the Mong Dynasty and Shoney's. You could find FHSers bagging groceries at Dillon's and IGA, and behind the bakery counter at Safeway and Food 4 Less. Though grocery stores, fast food places, and restaurants provided a number of students jobs, some found more unusual employment — in book stores, antique shops, the youth center, and as professional photographers.

Though working meant a measure of independence, self-sufficiency and the opportunity to learn new things, one thing was apparent — a paycheck never lasted long enough.

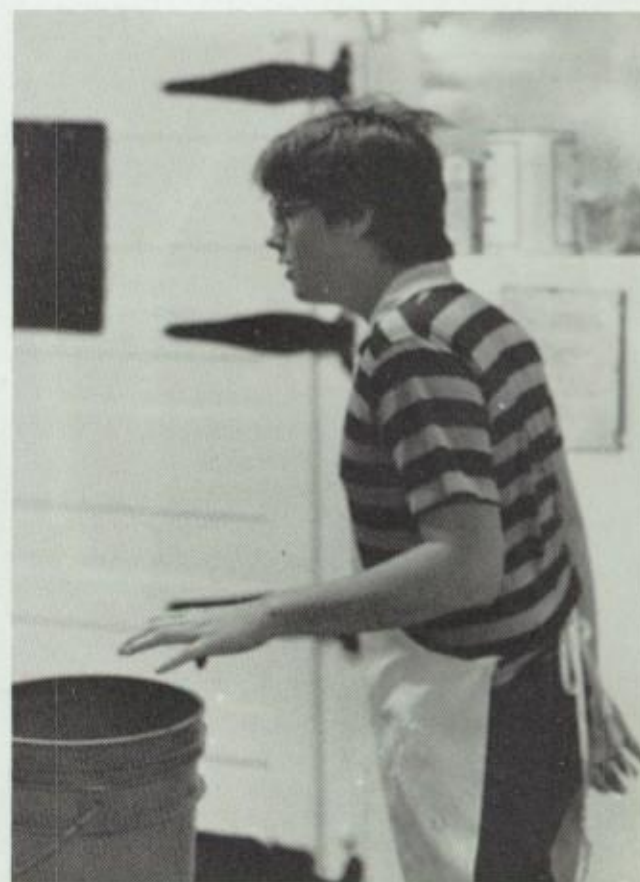

Ron Meurer builds up his muscles while he earns money by lifting groceries into cars.

Tim Parker shows where most of his money went — to keep his truck running.

Where Does All The Money Go?

... It goes for clothes, movies, albums, food, dates, and gas. It seemed like the car was always empty and to do anything you had to have your car. The way most high school students earned their money was by working, even at fast food places, and much of their paycheck went back to these places at lunch. There were other things money went for, too.

Junior Roy Hartman, a crew member at McDonald's, got a job so he could buy a Mustang. A lot of students saved money for a trip to the beach or skiing during spring break. No matter what you spent money on, it always seemed like there was never enough of it.

Courtney Carney takes a deep breath as Student Council member Robin Rogers and a Bloodmobile nurse prepare to take her donation.

People anxiously anticipated the lush food that awaited them in the lunch line.

The gym was open to whoever wanted to play basketball or just watch.

You'd not been through high school unless you'd spent all of lunch taking tests.

Some students had to fuel up on the cafeteria food to help them face their classes.

Most Popular Period Of All

Ask anyone what their favorite class was and they would tell you activity period without any hesitation. Students were very lucky to have this period instead of just a 30-minute lunch because it left time for club meetings, intramurals, pep rallies, and catching up on homework.

No matter what day of the week, you'd surely find something going on. Some students ate at school and had time left for activities. Those students who needed help in classes could go to the math study center or library. Some students played ping-pong, chess or basketball. Some chose to leave campus for lunch and somehow get back before the tardy bell.

Regardless of what they did during activity period, everyone agreed that Fayetteville High wouldn't be the same without it.

Activity period was also used for many pep rallies and assemblies.

Kelly Kirkwood and Lee Holt spent their activity periods in the game room.

It's a rare sight to see sophomores Larissa Sherwood and Kari Smith more than 10 feet apart.

(The Blues Sisters?) New student, Crystal Smith, finds it easier to fit in with a "little help from her friends;" such as Noelle Davenport.

Friends or enemies? These senior guys say they're friends.

Seniors Lisa Rinn, Anna Drane, and camera-shy buddy Laura Pool, have been hanging out together since grade school.

You've Got A Friend

Friends, parties, dating, and even a little studying were all a part of this year. But when we look back years from now, the parties will have faded, most of the dates too, but the friends will remain. Sure there were difficult times, (never wreck your best friend's car; it puts a definite strain on the relationship) but when your parents became unbearable and your boyfriend/girlfriend made the break, who was there to help you through it and make it all seem better? Your best friend, of course. Some friends were older, younger, or of a different sex, but whatever their sex or age, they were probably the most important part of your high school years.

Juniors Patrick Akin and Danny Lyle share an "enthusiastic" friendship.

"You & Me"

A year can be remembered as special in many different ways. Many students will remember 1985 for the relationship they shared with that special person and remember the fun times they shared throughout the year. Though feelings were strong and times spent together will be treasured, the eternal question is, as the Beatles said in their classic song, "Will you still need me, will you still feed me, when I'm 64?"

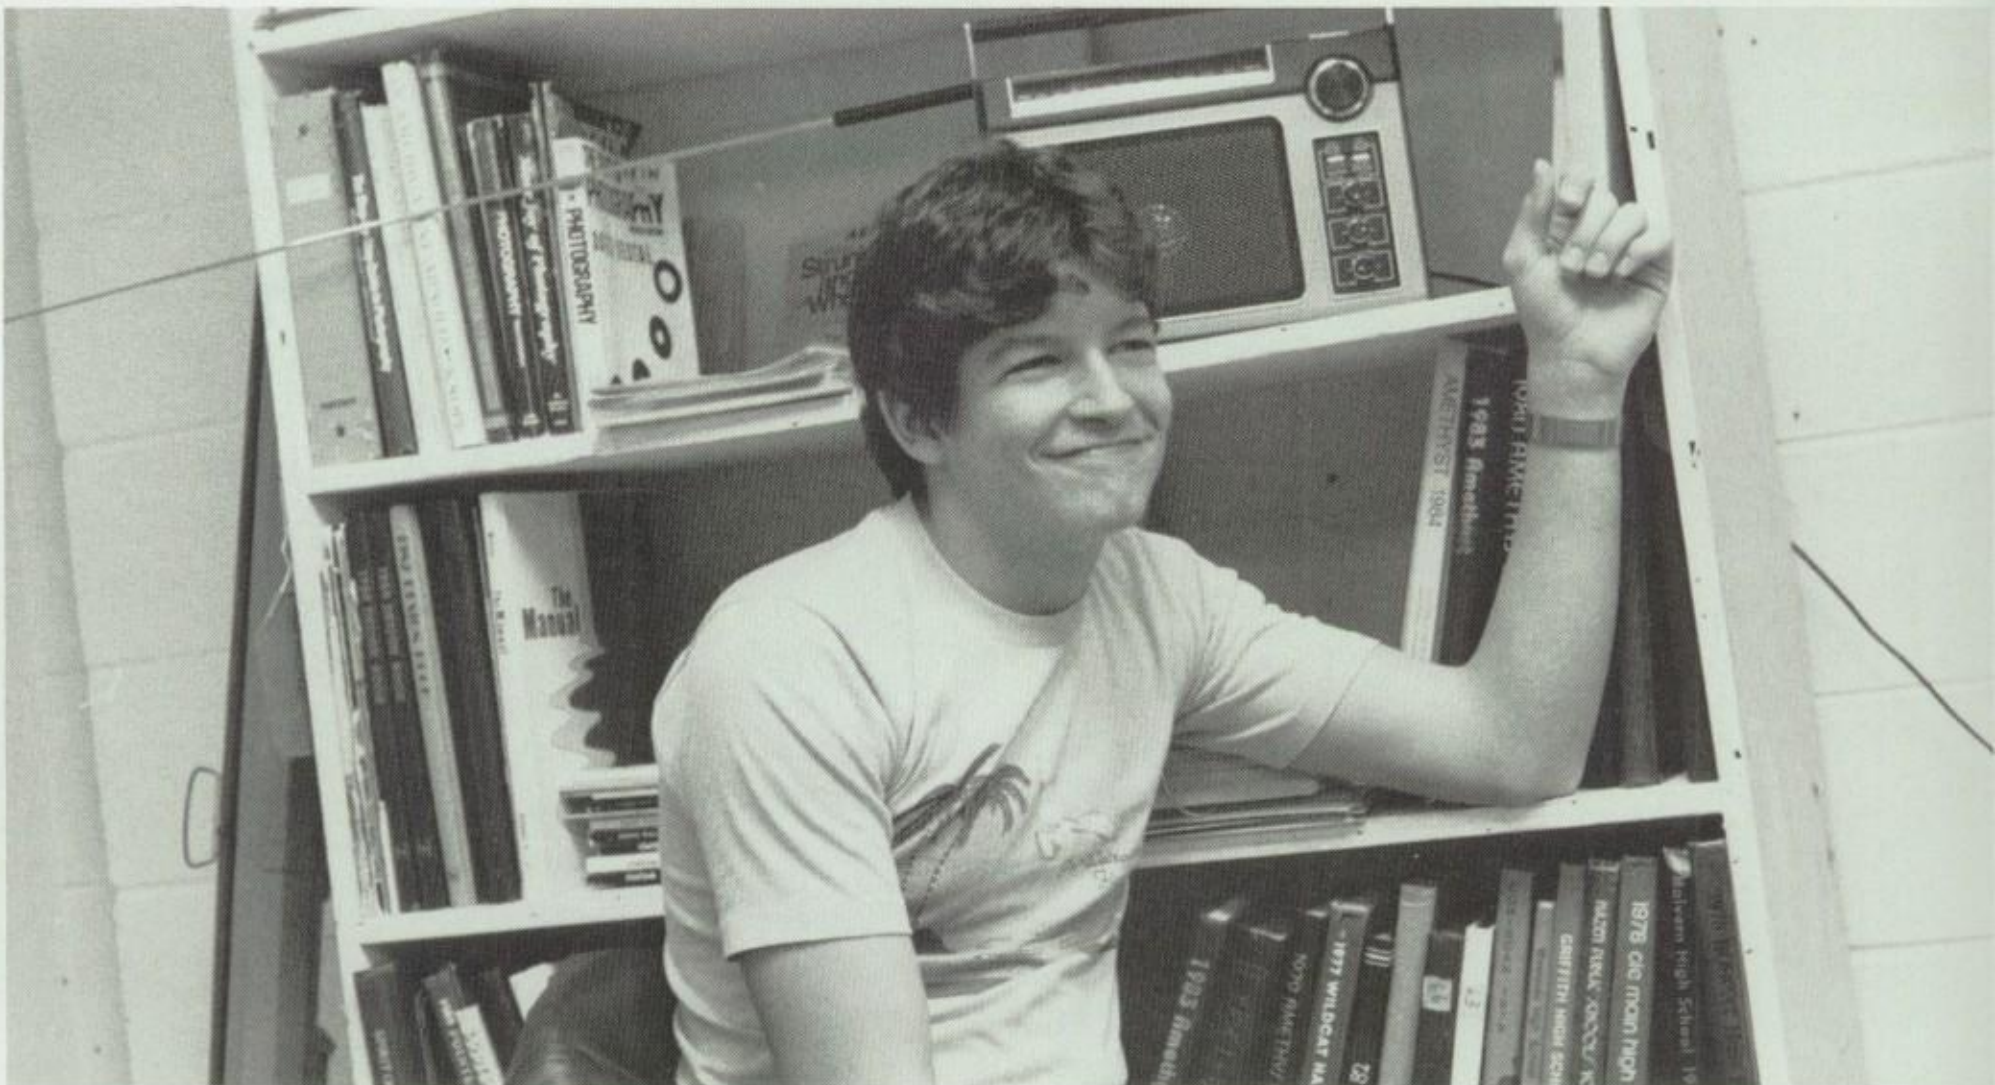

Mike Rogers and Michelle Hays, a very cheerful couple, seem to be happier as the days go by.

Because The Music Matters

Music was everywhere at FHS - in the halls, in the cars, and even in a few class rooms, but then again, what would high school be without it? Whether it was new wave, heavy metal, soul, or old Deep Purple that got you to boogie, when the tune started, so did the feet.

FHS students spent a large amount of time listening to music, and a large amount of money buying it. New songs and groups came and went in 84-85. But by far the biggest song to hit our ears was "Purple Rain" from the motion picture Purple Rain. The song was the theme of the Homecoming Dance and turned out to be the theme of the class of '85.

No matter what taste in music you had, you can be sure that memories of high school will be filled with memories of good music.

Cyril Dickey shows off his large boogie box, and he also has the attire to match the black and white dice hanging on the corner.

Deck The Halls

The 1984 Yule Tide season arrived like so many other Christmases — full of peace, love, joy, and pondering upon what gifts to give and how to pay for them.

Of course, decorations and Santa's home had been up at the Mall since the day after Thanksgiving, but most high school students didn't catch the Christmas spirit until the final week of classes. The choir's annual performances by the A Cappella Choir, Chorallettes, male school administrators, a new group called "Student Council" (catchy name huh?), as well as a perfectly spine-chilling, virtuoso performance of "five golden rings" by senior Mike Rogers, set everyone to humming "Jungle Bells" down the halls.

Christmas parties abounded during that week. Many a student could be seen munching a Dorito while taking those many tests teachers so graciously piled on the final Friday.

One down note of Christmas break 1984 was that no one was totally able to forget school work, for finals were there to greet us when we came back. Also there was the sobering thought of five and one-half more months until summer.

The Student Council "Glee Club" helped provide humorous entertainment during the X-mas program. They were led by their fearless leader, Coach Johnson.

Academics

Purple Pride was abundant this year. We excelled not only in sports, but in the class rooms also. Fayetteville High offered one of the most varied course selections in the state.

Our Science Department offered numerous types of courses and boasted a national award winning physics teacher, Mr. Bill Merrifield. The English Department satisfied our taste for different types of literature, such as Shakespeare and Mythology, and prepared us for college through rigorous college prep classes. Our Math Department taught courses ranging from calculus and finite to everyday business math to prepare students for the business world. The Social Studies Department covered not only our country, but Europe and ancient civilizations as well. Besides the hard-core subjects of math, science, English, and social studies, course selections included numerous important electives. Whether we took a course for interest only or to prepare for our future, we did it as

Work 'n Play

Students had varying plans for their study hall hour. Some worked on class assignments, some socialized, some even played around and goofed off.

Describing her plans for the hour, Sara Brown said, "I am going to do my homework and sleep."

"I'm going to read my book and talk to my buddy, Thomas," Jon Wampler said.

Stating his plans, Jay Rodman said, "I am going to do my Algebra II and cause trouble."

"I am going to do my homework and be bored," declared Noelle Tinnin.

Carl McCrary said, "I am going to check out the women."

"I'm going to talk to Buela, Buela, Buela!" said Garrett Welch.

Jennifer Pinkerton said, "Sometimes I go to the library. I used to just sit in study hall and talk to people, but I don't do that anymore. I study now. I really need a study hall."

Throughout the year, study hall was a place where students could do serious work or just have some light-hearted fun.

Literary Magazine

Putting It Together . . .

When the 1984 school year rolled to an end, the time came for the selection of the new Connotations staff. Prospective members submitted applications with both objective and essay questions. Interviews were conducted by one junior member and one senior member of the 1984 staff, as well as English coordinator Ms. Judy Gregson. "We had a lot of applicants last year," said Ms. Gregson, "It was hard narrowing it down to the twelve positions open." But the selections were made, and a staff of six juniors and eleven seniors was formed.

Connotations staff worked hard this year. Projects included two elementary school magazines (The Washington Post, and Leverett's Frogs Illustrated); various money making projects; as well as the high school's own Connotations.

Connotations was designed as an outlet for students literary creativeness. Submissions go through an admissions board with the final outcome layed out by the staff. As one staff member said, "Connotations gives people a chance to see their work published." In years to come, it is a glimpse back on what students were feeling as well as doing.

On Top Again

Besides being one of the best schools in the state in athletics and arts, Fayetteville High boasted an academic program that topped many others in Arkansas.

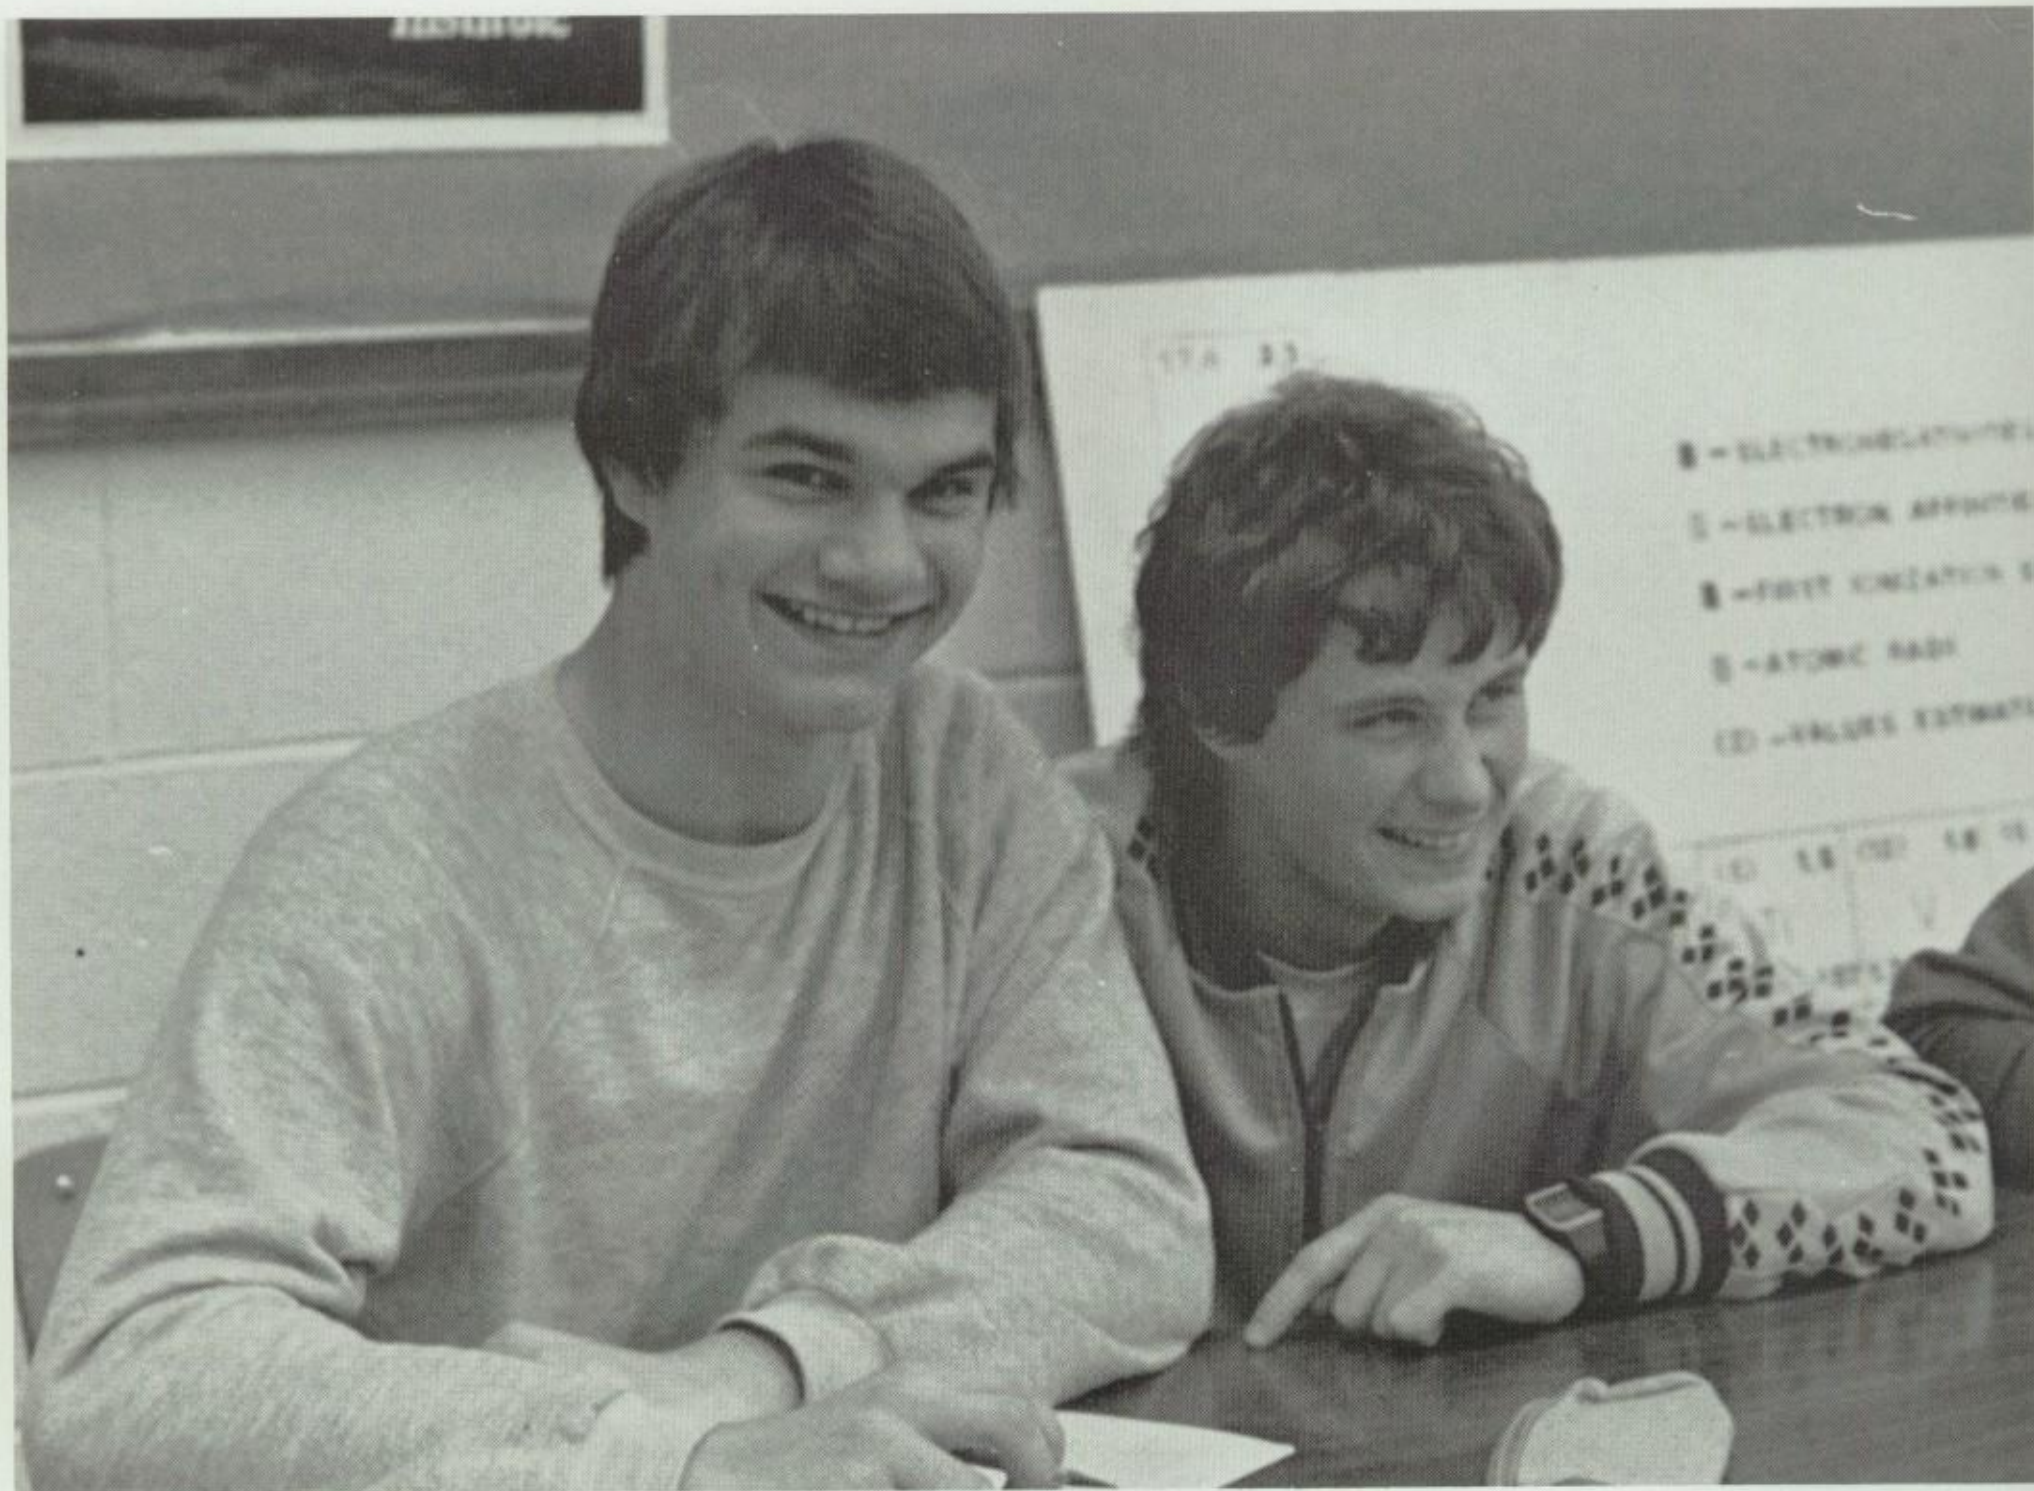

The English Department offered students a wide variety of courses. Though sophomores took Sophomore English, juniors and seniors chose from fifteen courses ranging from Shakespeare to Expository Writing.

In the Math Department, the teachers worked together in teams to teach students equally. They offered a variety of courses ranging from Elementary Algebra to Advanced Placement Calculus.

In science, the standard offerings of biology, chemistry, and physics were only the beginning. There were also courses in anatomy, physiology, bio-chemistry, and botany which could help prepare students interested in going into medicine or agriculture. A science seminar was also offered to students interested in individual scientific inquiry.

In social studies, American history formed the core of the program, but students also could elect to take courses in world history, ancient and medieval civilization, sociology, and psychology.

Students were also given the opportunity to take electives such as exploratory agriculture, art, shorthand, fashion merchandising, Latin, journalism, music theory, first aid, and debate.

America . . . A Home Away From Home

Every year students from several foreign countries visit the United States à la FHS to experience the American lifestyle first-hand. Students representing Germany, Sweden and Thailand all attended classes here this year by way of various exchange programs.

The students, as well as their host families and classmates, all benefitted greatly from the unique learning experience which is the motive behind all of these programs: to learn about foreign cultures. As Lek Chaipanna from Thailand said about an American Field Service (AFS) weekend, "To see so many people from different countries — Belgium, Peru, Italy, Brazil, America — talking together . . . it is unimaginable."

When asked what she liked or what had impressed her the most about the U.S., Lek commented on one of our best known cult movies. "Last night I saw the 'Rocky Horror Picture Show.' The audience went so crazy over the dumb movie," but she quickly added, "It was a lot of fun!"

Maybe you, too, were able to be acquainted with some of the exchange students this year and learn a little bit about another country. There are many differences, but wherever you grow up in the world, some things seem to always be the same. Per Dannegard from Sweden shares the same feelings as many American teenagers when asked about returning home. "Oh, c'mon, it's no fun to go back to the same old country — I've lived there eighteen years already!"

Olle Jaeger, Lek Chaipanna, Eric Strohmeyer, and Per Dannegard show that clowning around is definitely universal.

Getting Into It With Science

The exceptional Science Department offered students many varied and interesting opportunities. They even had their own club.

The classes included the usual biology, chemistry, and physics, and specialized classes in anatomy, botany, biochemistry, field biology, and physiology. In these classes you could discover what made you tick, what made your environment work and how you could help preserve it.

Some people expected the Science Club to be a group of people mixing chemicals, but it was much more than that. Members went camping, backpacking, and helped to maintain a hiking trail.

It all added up to an exciting and memorable year for science students.

Art

Unspoken Language

The art classes at FHS were stepping out in the artistic world this year. The students along with their teacher, Ms. Virginia McNair, went to contests, art reviews, and shows throughout the year. On October 27, they traveled to Little Rock for the State Portfolio Rotunda where they showed their portfolios to leading art directors from all over the United States. Then the students went on to selling lollipops to pay their way to the Arkansas Young Artist Association (AYAA). These two activities helped the artists see what they needed to improve their work. Back in Fayetteville, their art show at the Northwest Arkansas-Mall was on February 1. Also in Fayetteville, their work could be seen at the Public Library where the Statue of Liberty was displayed. The statue was made by the students in the art classes at FHS. The contest of the year was the Barret Hamilton Contest, where the winner's school got $1000 for the art department.

With a new advanced painting and drawing class, and the help of the other hard working art classes, it was easy to see how the department did so well in all of its activities this year.

Drama

The Creative Outlet

"Theater is the most comprehensive of the arts and a wonderful creative outlet for people because it offers such a wide variety of opportunity," said Mrs. Patricia Collier, the drama and Thespian sponsor. This year's drama schedule was a busy and exciting one. They held three major productions, the first being the Music Man, which was very successful. Drama also produced children's plays and took them to the elementary schools. They held a "Day of One-Acts," in which the student body could see one act of each play free. Drama also put on programs for civic groups and held the school's talent show.

Thespians, which is a part of drama, is an international theater organization. The requirements of Thespians are to accumulate points based on play productions and performances. Thespians were really busy! Every year they take a trip to New York for their State Thespian Conference. This year they saw about four plays a day, met actors and actresses, and traveled around the city. They also traveled around the local region to see plays.

Teachers, such as Mrs. Vicky Sloan, were always available during activity period if you wanted to check out sports equipment.

A new addition to FHS' activity period, the bookstore proved to be worth it's weight in gold, both for it's study space and the junk food it provided.

Whether cramming for a test, finishing up homework, or just trying to decipher math in general, many students, such as David Thoma, could be found in the math study center during activity period.

Intermission . . .

Senior Doug Helixon demonstrates his smooth but powerful ping-pong serve.

Some girls will do anything for a free lunch — even snuggle up to an Aggie! Like junior Marti Brewer and senior Chris Halligan.

Activity period, that well deserved break that rolled around about 11:30 each day, was one hour of freedom in which to recuperate enough to face the rest of the day.

Activity period was appreciated twice as much in the 1984-85 school year because of the numerous threats to close it. There were some non-responsible acts which happened, but on the whole, it was used responsibly.

Many worthwhile activities occurred during this period: various clubs met; pep-rallies were held; the math study center, computer lab and library were open; and the gym was free for games and organized tournaments.

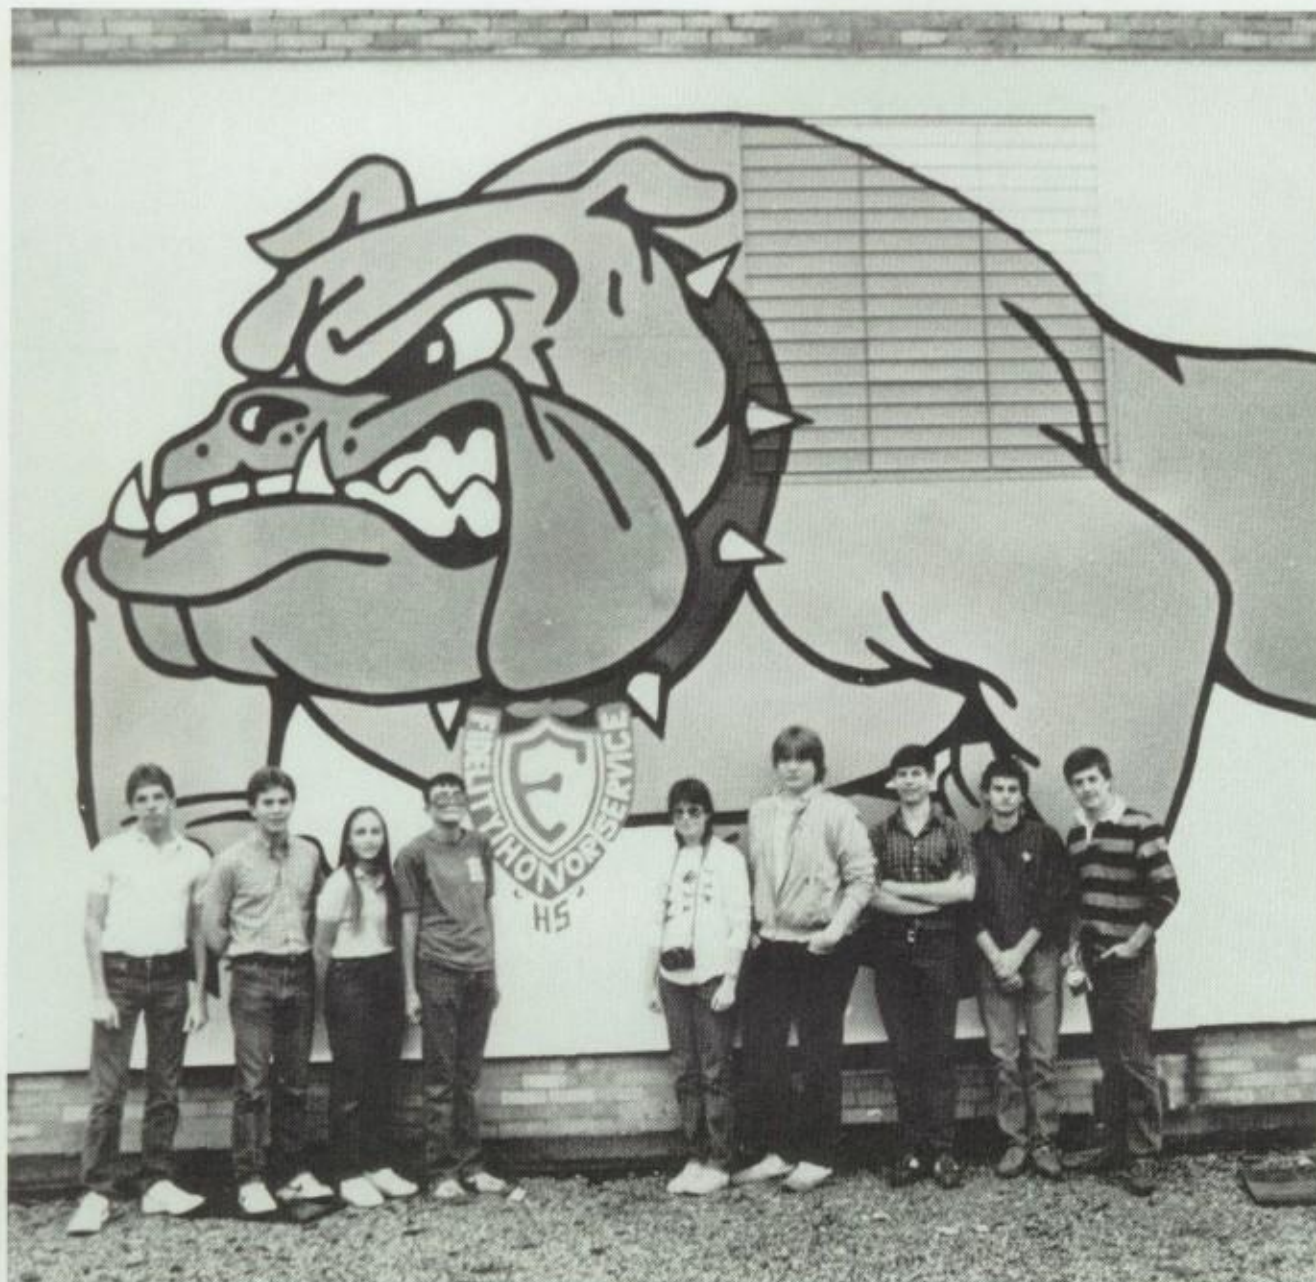

There were weeks when you wouldn't have known students at FHS could leave campus. Some learned to juggle two club meetings, finish an essay due that day, run to the bookstore for food, and stop by the math study center in one short hour. Activity period may have been the best time management class offered at FHS.

Say Cheese!

What would a yearbook be without pictures? The Photo Staff worked hard to get as many people as possible in the camera's eye. The Photo Staff took approximately 20,000 pictures during the year. They went to great lengths to catch that perfect shot. You could find Leonard Albright on the roof of the school capturing the purple dog on film, or Mike Cale driving from one end of town to the other to record every school in Fayetteville.

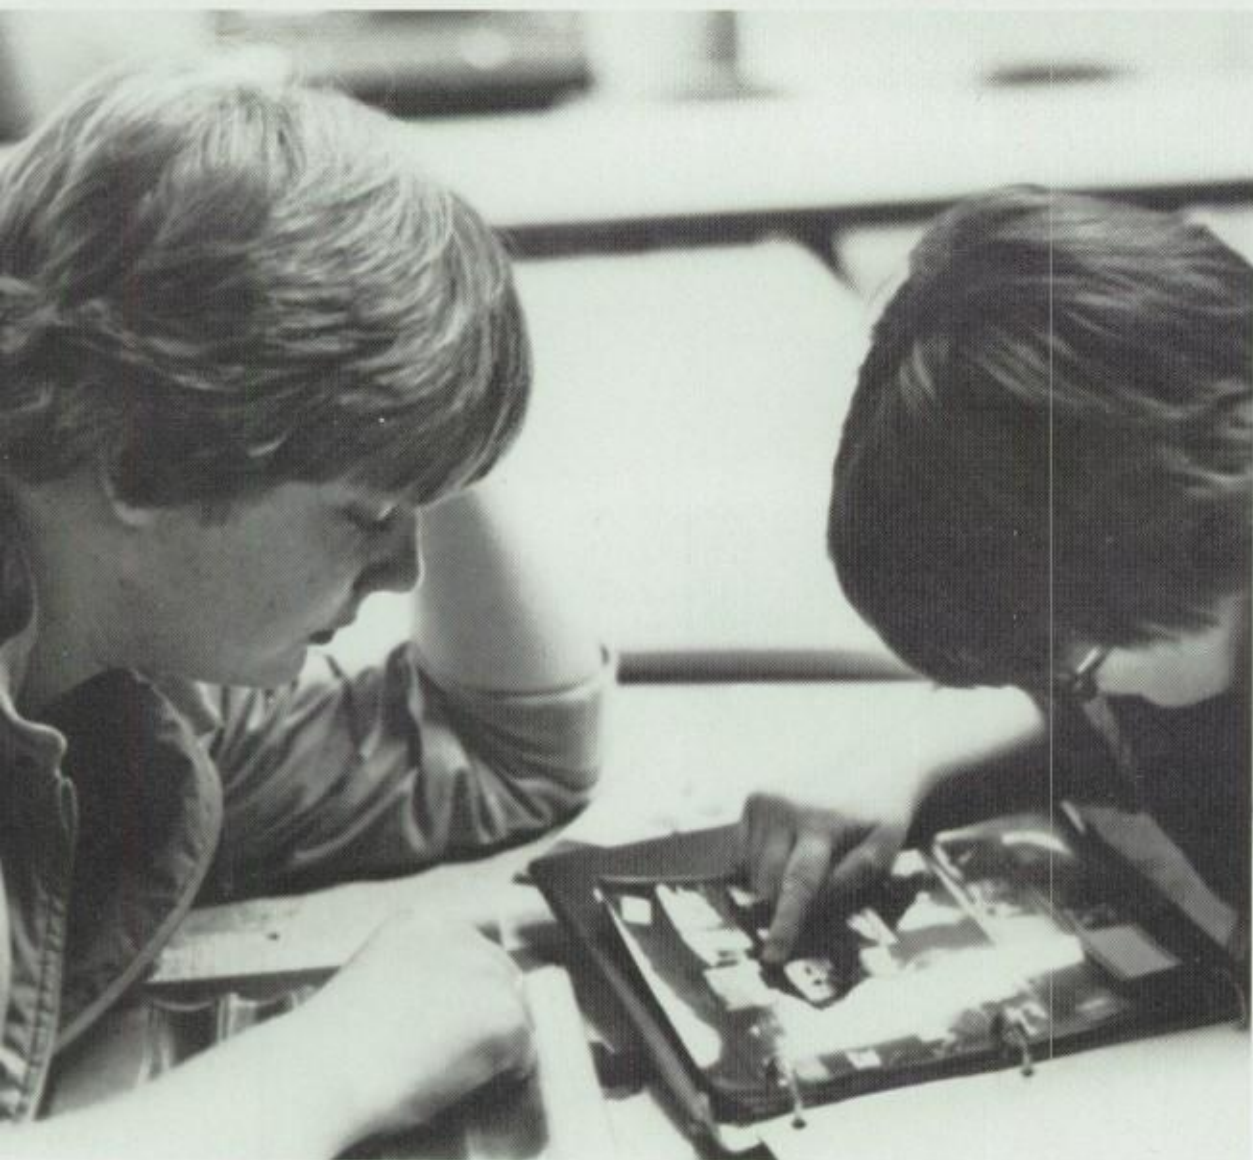

Staff photographers waded through mud at football games, fought the crowds at basketball games, and braved the rigors of shooting pictures of students at lunch, in class, during club meetings, and at work and play. They could be found at school plays, concerts, and pep rallies. They made sure both the newspaper and yearbook had plenty of pictures for their news, feature, and advertising pages.

Behind The Lines At FHS

Hard work and dedication go into putting out a newspaper and getting it out on time. Each member of the Register staff was required to research, write, and edit stories, design page layouts, and sell advertisements for each issue. All this had to be done by the deadline time, and things were usually pretty hectic.

The new sponsor this year was Mrs. Susan Akin. She brought a lot of good ideas with her to the department and was the backbone of the staff. The editor, Chris Halligan, made assignments, gave advice, corrected mistakes, and always broke the tension of deadlines with his irrepressible humor and sarcastic remarks.

No newspaper would be complete without a solid photo staff. Photographers this year were patient, dedicated, and always ended up getting the prints out in time.

Due to the hard-working staff, sponsor, editor, and photographers, this year's Register was one of the best.

Putting The Year's Memories Together

If you stepped into the journalism room on any given day this past year, you might have found any one of the following: Neil 'the Suess' Shipley going through the points of his Tornado-Toilet Theory, the yearbook newcomers agonizing about how to overcome the 'trapped white space' demon, or the staff on a deadline day nose deep in the negative files screaming, "I need some pictures!"

Even though the yearbook period was a lot of fun, what it came down to was a lot of hard work and long hours to meet deadlines. As editor Dena Fitts put it, the yearbook staff always has the obligations of "Working to make the yearbook better than the previous year, getting as many people in as possible . . . and staying out of debt."

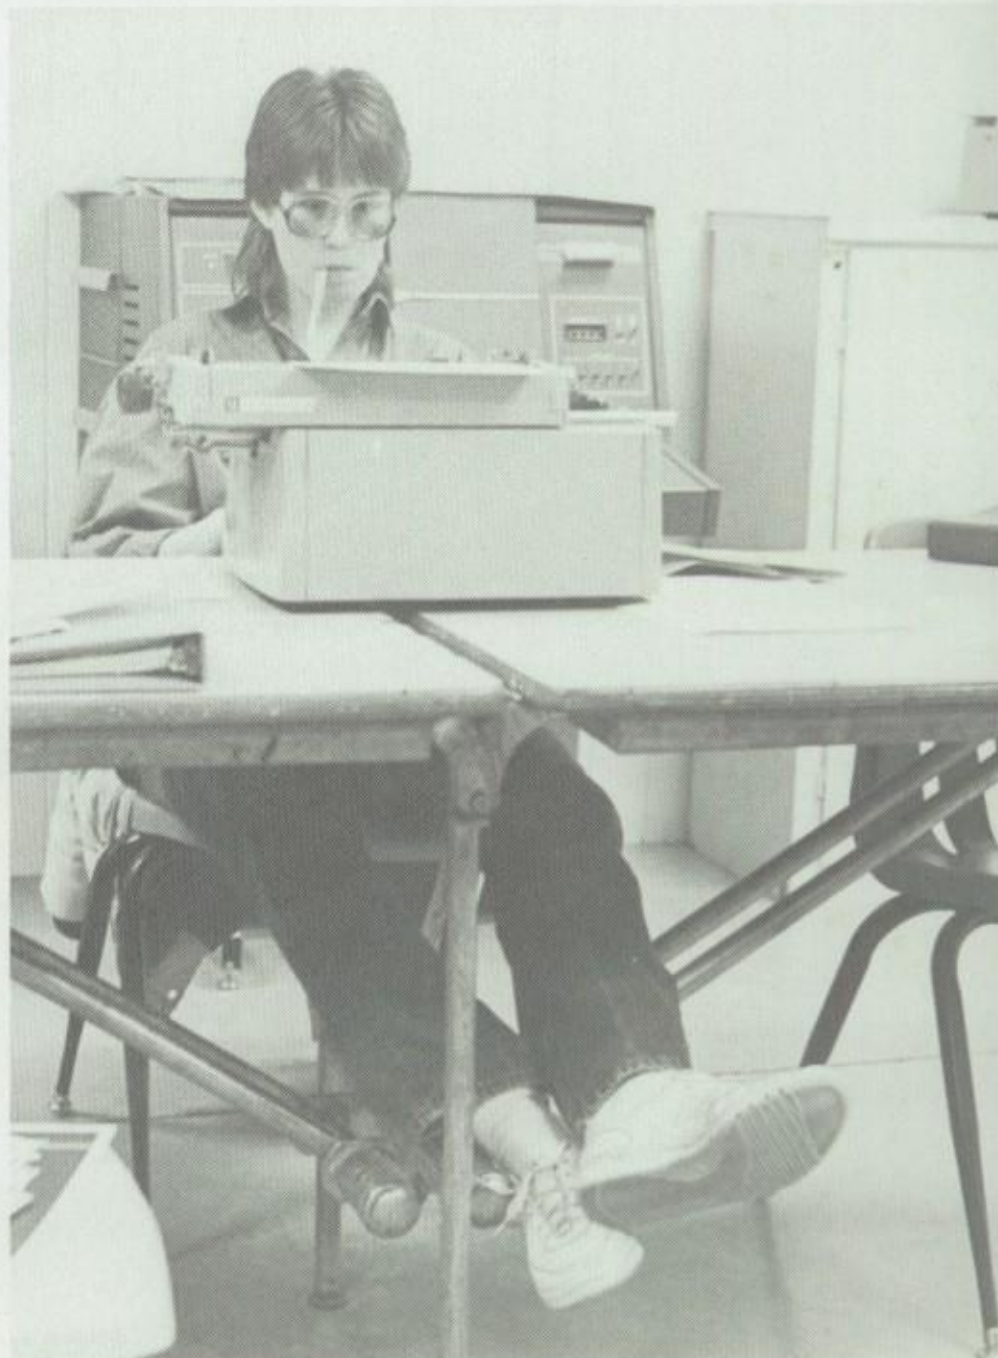

Sound easy? Not exactly. Long before the first page of the book was even imagined, the members hit the street selling ads to offset the $20,000 production costs. Because the ads campaign was so successful, the books were sold for $20 instead of the actual printing cost of $28. When ad sales were wrapped up, the staff took on the task of creating the book itself, picture after picture, story after story, deadline after deadline. Nine people covered the entire year's events — from workdays to weekends, sports to academics — whatever, putting together the memories of the '84-'85 school year.

All in all, in the immortal words from the seniors on the staff, "It's been a peach!"

People

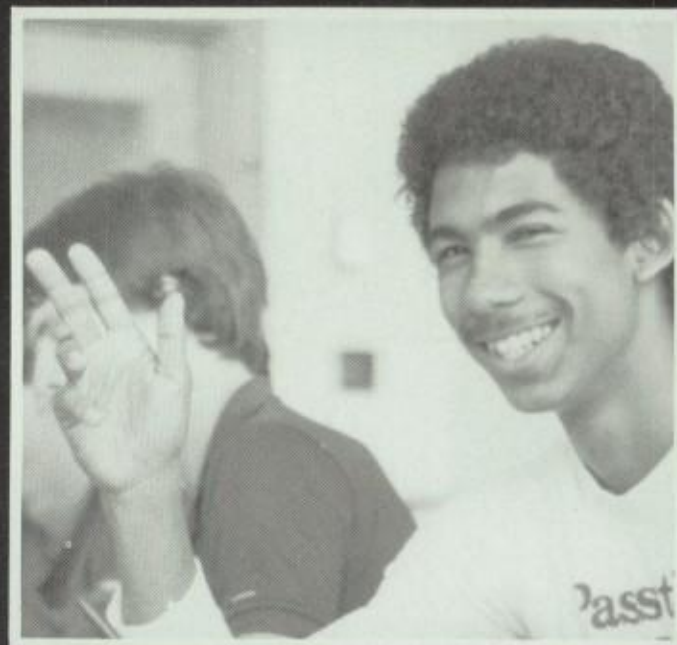

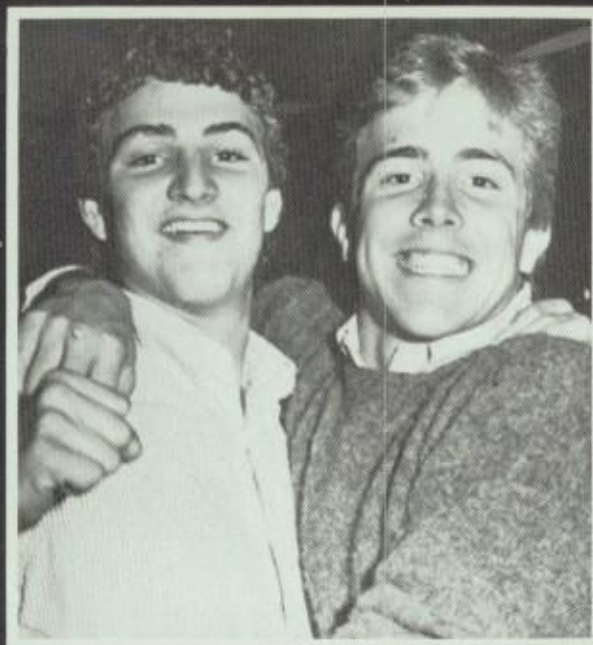

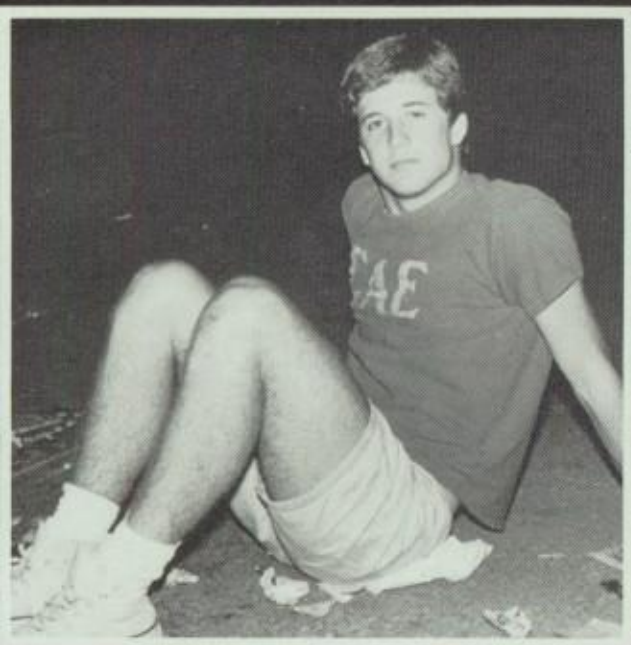

Sophomores left it all behind — the Woodland-Ramay rivalry and competition. They were no longer Cowboys or Indians; they merged to become Bulldogs. The juniors were sometimes a little cocky, feeling their superiority over the sophomores and sometimes a little scared, anticipating their senior year and the end of their school years. Seniors, known for their continuous party ability and senior pranks, were constantly talking of "next year." All of us, sophomores, juniors, and seniors, were a varied group. Whether we considered ourselves punkers, breakers, preppies, or the forgotten race somewhere in between, we were always ...

This group of juniors shows us how to get through school - live it up!

You can tell that Dana Martin, Melissa Hill, and Kelly Dunn would rather be home studying.

Drue Neel keeps up on current events by reading the Register.

Drum Major Amy Fairchild lets everyone know that FHS is number one.

Kara Nawojczyk, Scot Jeffus, Jeff Wall, and Pam Clodfelter spread some Christmas Cheer.

Jim Miller, John Crider, and Mark Thomas get down to some serious studying in health.

Juniors Living It Up

The junior year must be the most frustrating year of high school. You're too old to get away with pulling stupid sophomore jokes, yet not old enough to get the many privileges of being a senior. In addition, juniors also have to worry about college plans, class rings, and all the other things that lead to graduation.

Most juniors didn't let it get them down. They just stuck it out and lived it up while waiting for their senior year to roll around.

Why not . . . it's only one more year!

Courtney Lambeth, Brooke Parker, Ted Colwell, and Chris Arnold can't believe their assignment tonight.

Family Ties

"It's always nice to have a place to get money when you're broke. A number of students had the benefit of having a relative at school when their lunch funds ran dry. There are many father-daughter, mother-son, or even aunt and niece duets around FHS, so if you saw Maria Leverett in the principal's office often, don't think she was always in trouble; she was just visiting "DAD." These were the family ties at FHS: Mrs. Akin and her son Patrick, Mrs. Audrain and her niece Carolyn Jones, Coach Sherrill and his daughter Lara, Mrs. Smith and her son Leortice, Mr. Leverett and his daughter Maria, Mrs. Conrow and her son David, Mrs. Frans and her daughter Isabel Zalles, and Mrs. Danner and her nephew Jeff Harris.

All twelve of the family ties line up, one in front of the other, to get their picture taken.

Head Of The Class

Senior class officers may not always accomplish everything in perfect harmony, but accomplish things they do. They not only have the duties of officers of the other two classes, but the added burden of the Senior Prom also. Prom fund raising began with a carwash even before school started and continued throughout the year with various projects such as a senior class hayride and Hired Hand Day.

This year's officers, Betsy Crocker, Jammey Gregory, and Ross Thompkins were not only active in the senior class, they found time to participate in FBLA, Literary Magazine, Close-up, yearbook, archaeology, and after school jobs. They were not only an active group, but a hard-working one, too.

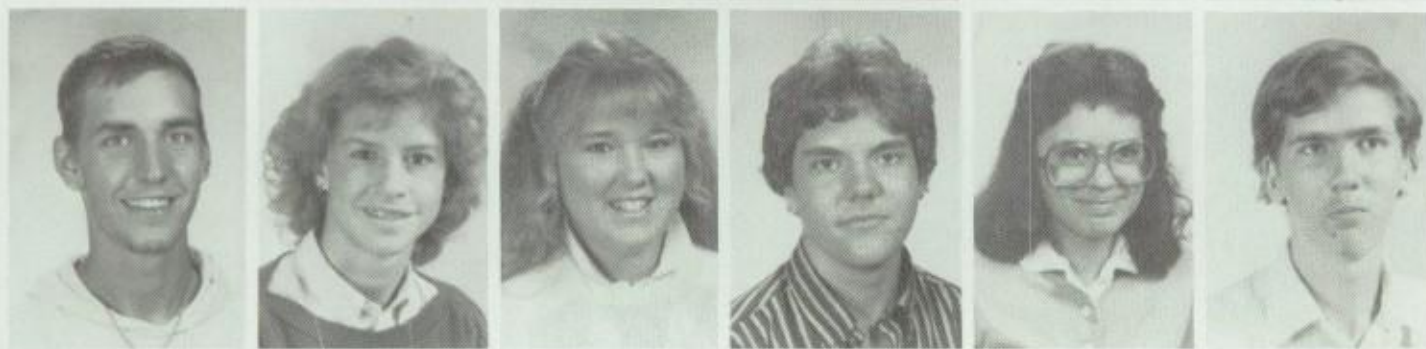

Jammey Gregory and Betsy Crocker teach Ross Thompkins the correct parliamentary procedure.

Up To Date

Times change and so do fads. This year was no exception. Last year's jeans were a little too long, and the same old colors just didn't seem quite right. Jeans jackets also appeared on the scene. And did the new fads look great? Yes, because they were new and up to date. But as great as things looked this year, you can be sure there will be a new style next year.

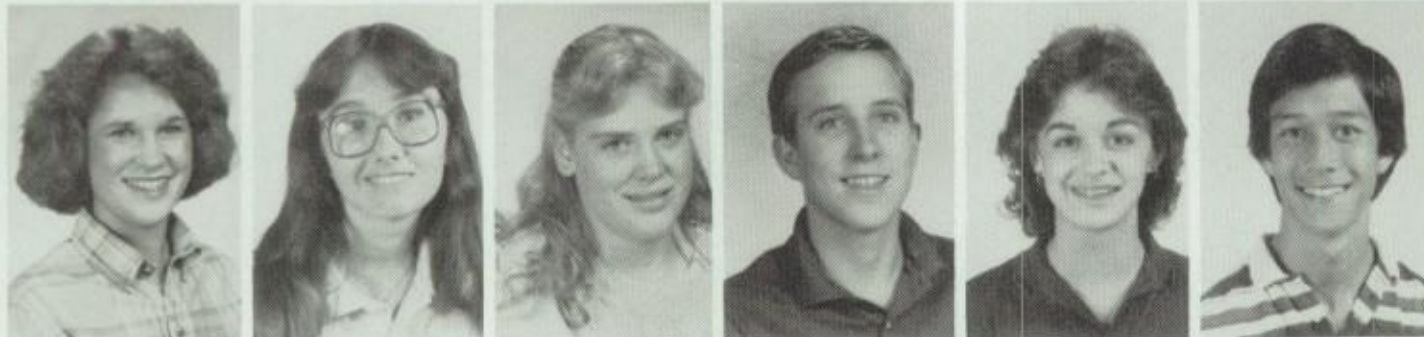

Junior Thomas White looks to the future with the new, up coming style.

Junior Ricky Upton knows denim has always been in style, but this year it came in jackets.

Classy Class Rings

Class rings seem to go along with high school, just like parties, ball games, and the Alma Mater. They represent a pride in your education as well as all the other events that happen in your life during your high school years. Not only do the rings represent what year you graduate, but they can also be designed to tell activities that you participated in or awards that you received. Because they have such sentimental value, many people keep their rings and wear them long after graduation. They provide an interesting way to remember the precious memories. Their value lasts for a life time.

Newlyweds Gari and Tim Anderson, examine their choices for senior rings.

A decision about a class ring can be a tough one. Here, Kelly Kirkwood and Cole Robertson think over their options.

"I Do"

One cold day this past January, in a ceremony complete with white lace and wedding bands, Leslie Wells and Garrett Welch exchanged their 'marriage vows'. The ceremony was part of the mock wedding staged by Mrs. Combs' Family Living class to learn a little bit about married life.

"Well I don't know how enlightened I am about getting married, but it sure was fun!" said one member of the congregation.

Not only did the class enact the wedding ceremony, but also was educated about the responsibilities entailed in making the big step. Said another participant, "Yeah, the responsibilities. Well, I know I'm gonna wait awhile."

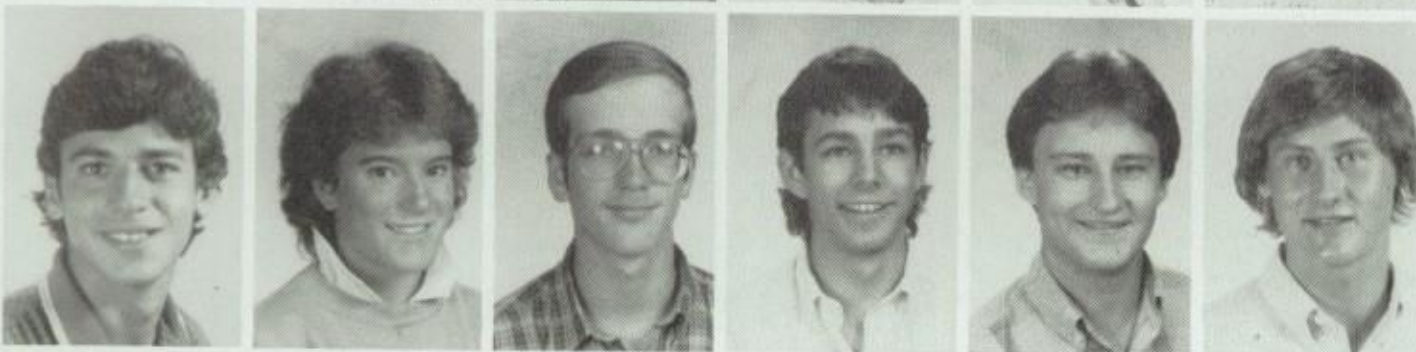

The bride and groom listen intently to the words of "preacher" Paul Cordry.

Sandy and Teresa Lindabury were this year's only set of senior twins.

The junior class also had one set of fraternal twins. They were Mitch and Matt Fincher.

And In The Beginning

The sophomores at FHS have always been the underdogs in a school full of Bulldogs. This year, the class of '87 was out to turn that tradition around. From football stars to academic wizards, the sophomores have made their place at Fayetteville High for years to come.

In the beginning, sophomores could be found lurking by the doors at 11:30 searching for the right person to bum a ride to lunch from, because the first thing any sophomore learned about high school was that open campus is fun. Then, as the school year went on, birthdays came and went, and more important priorities were sought out, such as getting a date with that beautiful junior girl or the senior stud.

After experiencing all these traumas, most sophomores agreed that the best part about their year was knowing next year they will be juniors.

#1 Privilege

The sophomore year is a time for growing up, and a big step is learning to drive. Getting a learner's permit, a license, and permission to use the car means a big measure of freedom — freedom to drive off campus for lunch, to drive over to a friend's house for some fun, to cruise around showing off the fact that you have a license - and the car. Though it's a little bit scary at first, it's just what every 16 year old needs.

Among those lucky sophomores who have that precious card, a driver's license, are Max Salassi, Natalie Buescher, Vince Chadick and John Shireman.

Take Charge

David Conrow, Kathryn Kincaid, and Mike Malone were the 1984-85 sophomore class officers. They had to help get the year's activities organized while still being inexperienced sophomores.

They put lots of hard work in on the Homecoming float and fund-raising projects they undertook. They helped make the sophomore year one of the most exciting and unforgettable years of school.

David Conrow and Mike Malone give a successful grin after completing this year's sophomore projects.

One thing the 1984-85 school year would be noted for was it's active sophomore class. They were every place, one of the most obvious being on varsity teams. Quite a few sophomores found themselves in varsity lineups. "It gave me experience and I really liked the senior players," said one sophomore football player. One thing to say - the teams would probably not have achieved the levels of success they did without their help. And as senior basketball player, Kevin O'Connell, put it, "The team would just not have been the same without them."

Varsity basketball player, sophomore Sean Sutton, helps the Bulldogs on to another home victory.

Kick Back

Sometimes students need a break from the same old routine of school. Hired Hand Day and the Freedom Jam concert both helped to take away the stress of classes.

Hired Hand Day was the perfect chance to have that senior you had your eye on — or your best friend, even your worst enemy do just what you ordered them to — for a price, that is.

Many people enjoyed the Freedom Jam concert — maybe because it got them out of class! The group gave a free "concert" lasting about 45 minutes, including historical "highlights" in the world of music.

The lead singer of Freedom Jam does his cowboy act during the concert.

Paul Parette struts his stuff as KKEG's disk jockey Randy Riley does the auctioning on Hired Hand Day.

Memorial

Sara Brown was a sophomore here at Fayetteville High School who died in her sleep in January. Known by many people, Sara's bright and lively personality gained her many friends. She will be long remembered for her wit and sense of humor.

Sara's father, Richard A. Brown, wrote a heartwarming letter to the Editor of the Northwest Arkansas Times. Perhaps he put it best: "The real sorrow I feel is for those who were not able to know a real angel who happened to be loaned to us on earth for a while. Remember that this kind of love from God never dies."

Teacher, Teacher, Can You Teach Me?

This year teachers were faced with mandatory teacher testing. Most teachers felt that education had become a political issue and that the test was a waste of time and money. Another issue was the length of the school day. Teachers were concerned that schedule changes required by new state standards would make it necessary for them to teach six classes instead of five. However after several meetings where teachers and parents could express their opinions, the School Board adopted a schedule which would maintain five teaching periods, and most teachers seem to be happy with this.

Whether looking for help on school work or learning some special skill, students found the teachers and staff to be an excellent and diverse group.

Making policy decisions occupies many hours for Supt. Winston Simpson and Asst. Supt. Charles Russell.

Clubs

One place you could find sophomores, juniors, and seniors all sitting together as a group was at a club meeting. Most of the time your class ranking or age didn't matter; it was your energy, work, and participation that counted. Some people seemed to be involved in every club, while some found only one to interest them. Whether you belonged to many or just one, there was usually a lot of work and fun involved. From planning dances in the 26 Club to judging cattle in FFA, all of our clubs were part of ...

Mind Games

Once again, this year FHS students participated in the quiz competition, Scott's Hi-Q. So what is Hi-Q? Established in 1948, it is the oldest continuing academic quiz program in the United States. It is a school assembly program to test the knowledge of eight outstanding students from each of the nine Northwest Arkansas high schools. The quiz is based on a student's scholastic knowledge, and questions require information that students can be expected to have acquired either at school or elsewhere.

Said one participant, "So much emphasis has been put on sports, but Hi-Q is a big accomplishment toward more academically oriented activities in school. I hope it will continue to gain interest, and I would encourage anyone to look into it. It is a challenge, but it's also a lot of fun!"

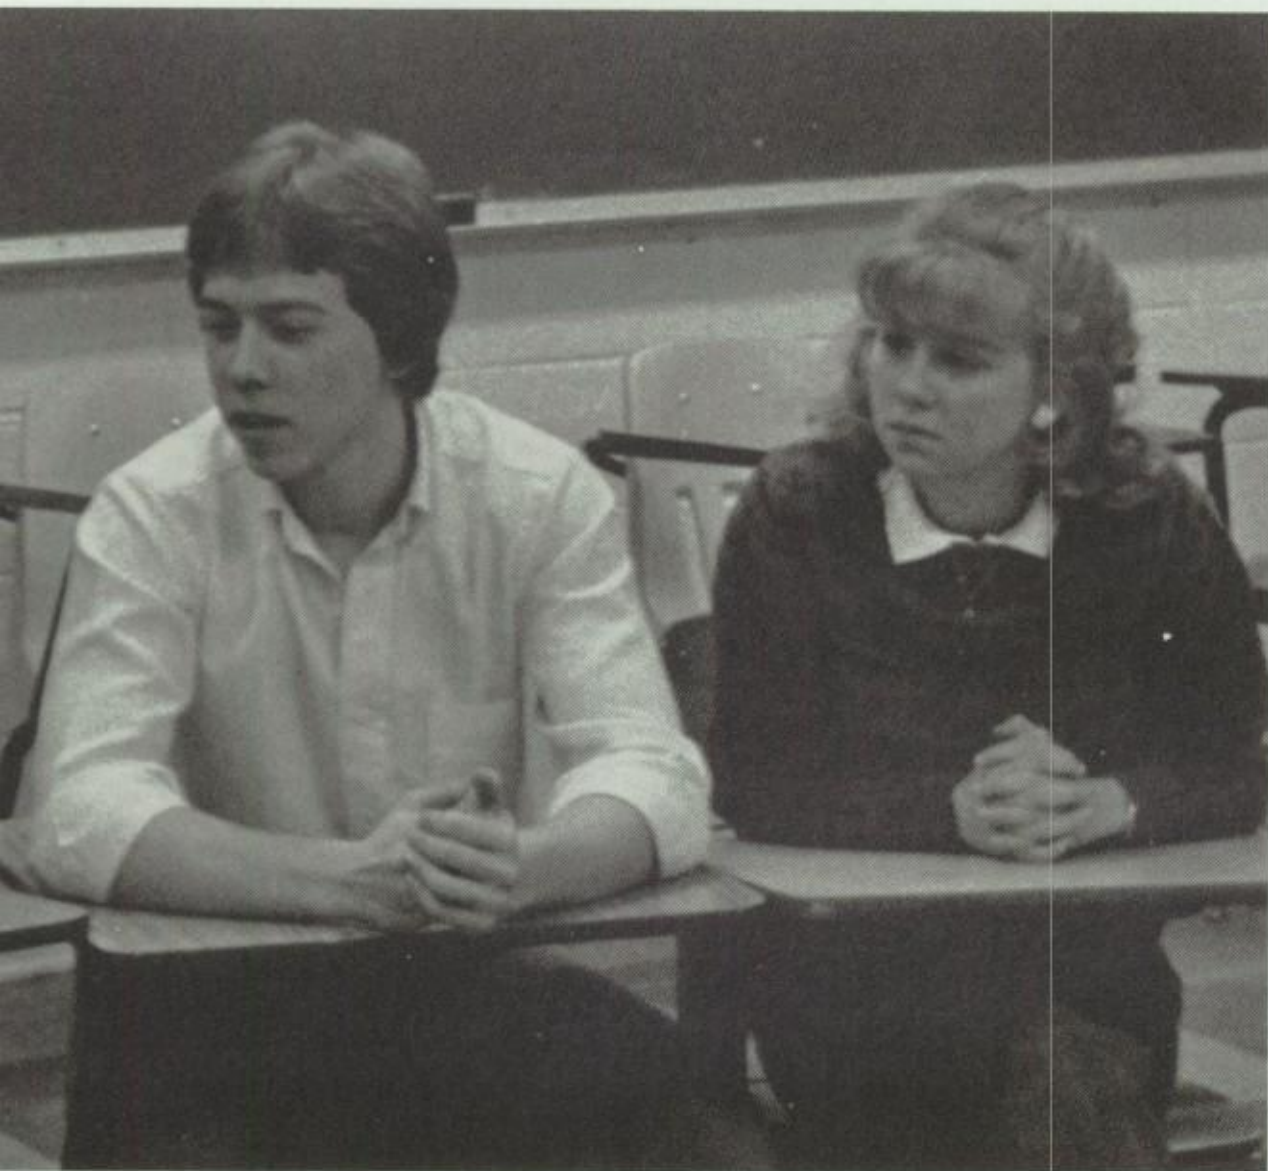

The Hi-Q program is definitely a big step forward for academics in our school system. It has finally provided an opportunity for outstanding students to be recognized and participate in educational activities. Hopefully, someday students will support these types of programs just as they do athletic sports.

Senior Janice Northup racks her brain for the correct answer.

FFA

The Future Farmers of America started off a successful year when they went to the state convention in Little Rock last June. At the convention David Hays was elected Northwest District vice-president. They also attended National Convention in Kansas City during November.

As their major fund raiser, they helped out at the Washington County Fair by parking cars and cleaning up the fair grounds.

FFA was also active in the livestock exhibits. They were winners in the following categories: Grand Champion Market Hog, Grand Champion Market Lamb, Grand Champion Suffolk Ram, and Sheep Showmanship. Fayetteville's chapter also placed in team categories: Susan Bale placed first in Agronomy, second place went to Kim Harris and Tonya Weaver was third. David Alderson was a second place winner in Electricity. Scott Westberg placed first in Horticulture. The third place winner in Poultry was Brad Hilker. The entire marching band proudly poses for its annual group picture.

The band listens closely to Mr. Bryan's instructions during class.

Stepping out smartly, band members begin their parade march on a crisp autumn day.

The flag corps leads the band around the Square at the Autumnfest parade.

It's not all work. Here the band enjoys the annual fall picnic and concert in the park.

The band learns that hard work at 7 am pays off in outstanding performances.

During half time at the football games, the band always puts on a spectacular performance.

Right On Beat

Our Fayetteville Band kept right on beat this year performing well always, and of course, keeping busy. They attended basketball and football games and added to school spirit and enthusiasm. They competed in marching contests, in which they got a second division at Russellville and a first division at Springdale, and were eligible for a sweepstakes trophy. In the spring they had solo and ensemble events in which individual players were judged. At the end of the year the band took a big trip where they competed with bands from other states. All in all, the band learned that hard work pays off.

Coming out of the United Methodist parking lot, the band starts their march in the Autumnfest parade.

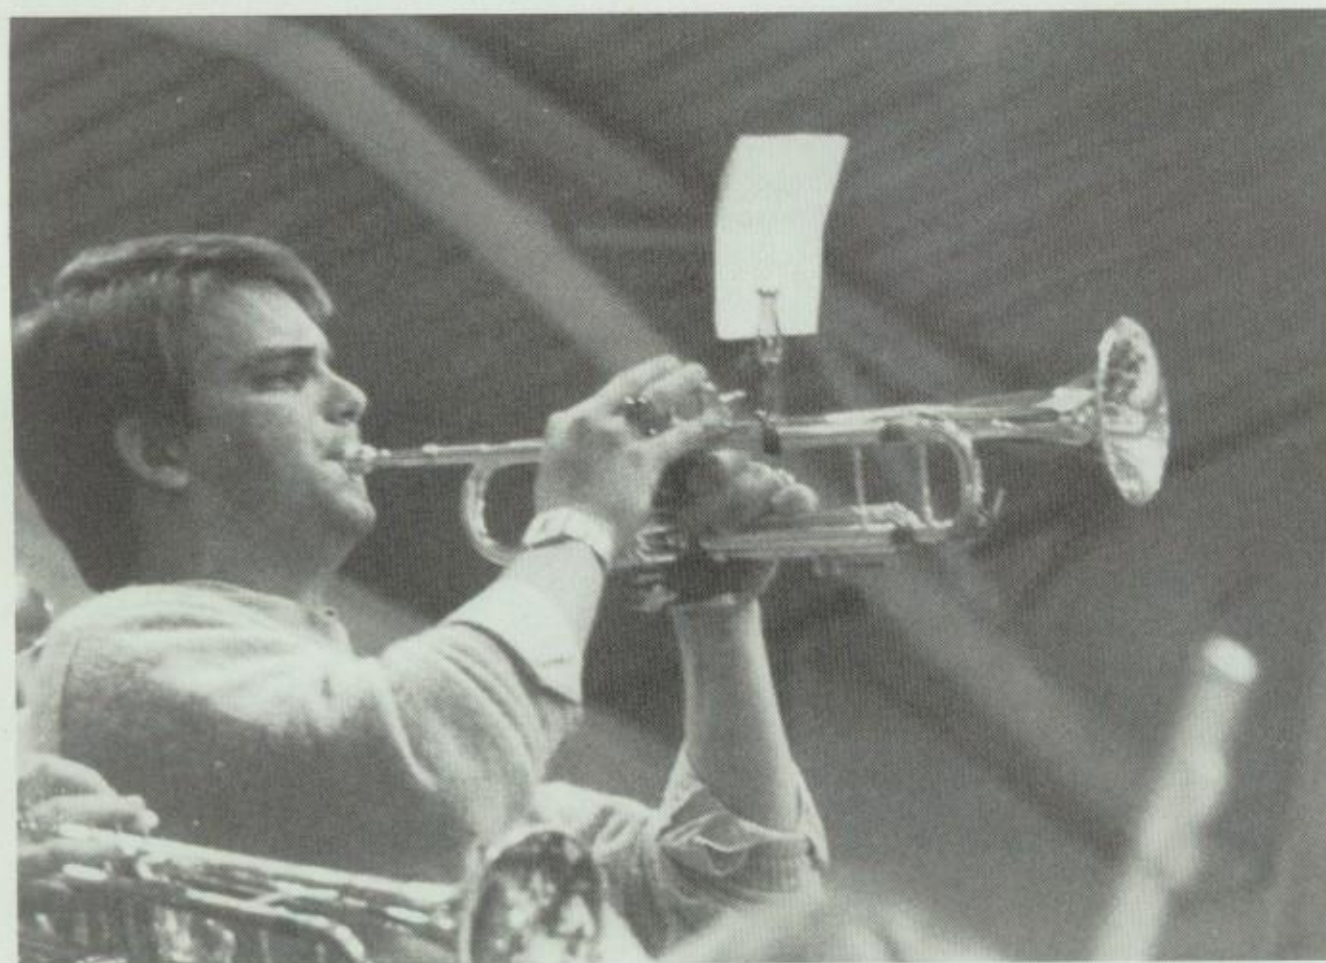

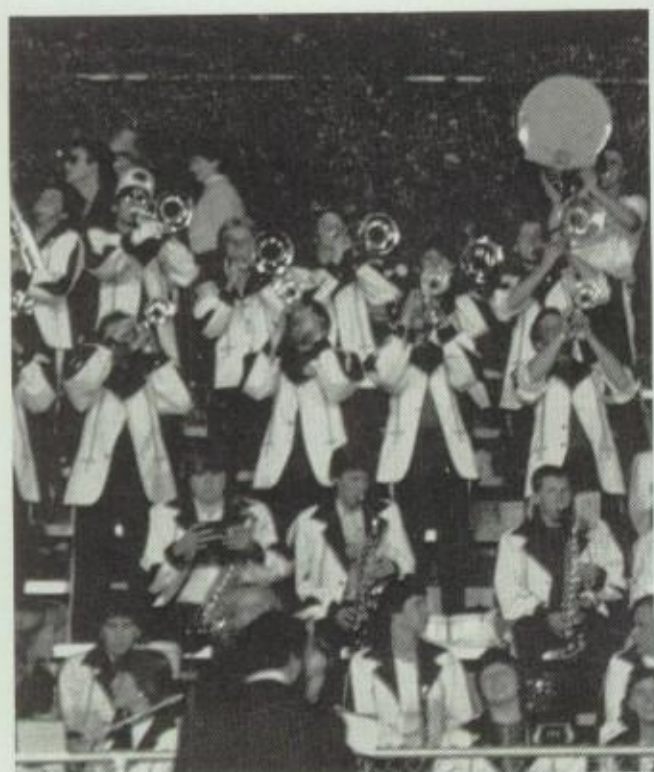

Showing their spirit, the pep band yells out during the exciting Springdale basketball game.

Mr. Bryan helps the cheerleaders out during the beach pep rally by yelling out the S in FHS.

Tune Up

Dedication and hard work were an integral part of orchestra in '84-'85. Rehearsals were held three days a week after school. Orchestra members participated in many events, such as all region and all state contests, solo and honors solo ensemble, and Central Arkansas Invitational.

One of the most exciting events for orchestra in '84 was their presentation of Handel's Messiah at a local church. As one listener said, "They performed really well. It was obvious they'd spent quite a lot of time on it."

FHS is proud to have three orchestra members in the Northwest Arkansas Symphony: Molly Sharp, Betsey Ellis and Gwynne Hirsch.

Singin' The Way To Success

The choir room was one of the busiest rooms in Fayetteville High. From 7:30 sectionals to after school performances, the choir members rushed in and out to practice their pieces. But anyone in the choir would tell you that it was all worth it.

The A Cappella Choir is a select choir made up of 82 singers. The girls in the choir form the Advanced Girls Choir while the boys form the Male Chorus. They worked all year on their annual winter and spring concerts. All three choirs took many pieces to region, state, and national contests in which they consistently received superior ratings. Members of the choir individually tried out for chairs in the All-Region and All-State Choirs and placed more students than any other school in the state.

Senior A Cappella member Melani Ferguson concentrates on learning the new piece for competition.

The Concert Choir was the training choir that consisted mainly of sophomores. They annually go to region and state festivals and receive superior ratings also.

The Choralettes, a 14 member girls ensemble, provided contemporary music. They performed for many banquets, conventions, and civic organizations to raise money for their summer tour. They also had three concession stands at the Razorback football games and car washes that added to the fund. The highlight of the year was the annual "Star Spangled Nite" which featured each girl as a soloist.

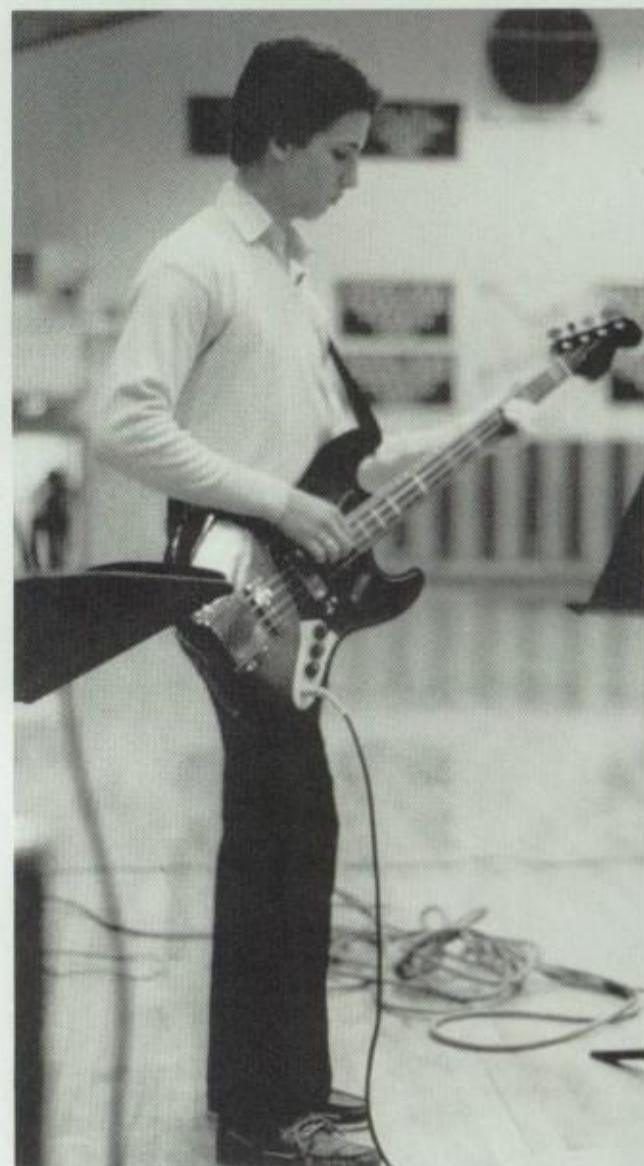

The A Cappella Choir, Advanced Girls Choir, Male Chorus, Concert Choir, and the Choralettes all teamed up for the Winter and Spring Concerts. Following tradition, they pulled off a dynamic performance once again.

The Concert Choir put lots of time in on practicing for their upcoming concerts.

To the guys in the A Cappella Choir, sectionals during lunch got to be a way of life.

Varsity player Leigh Anne Yeargan doesn't cut this Mounty any slack.

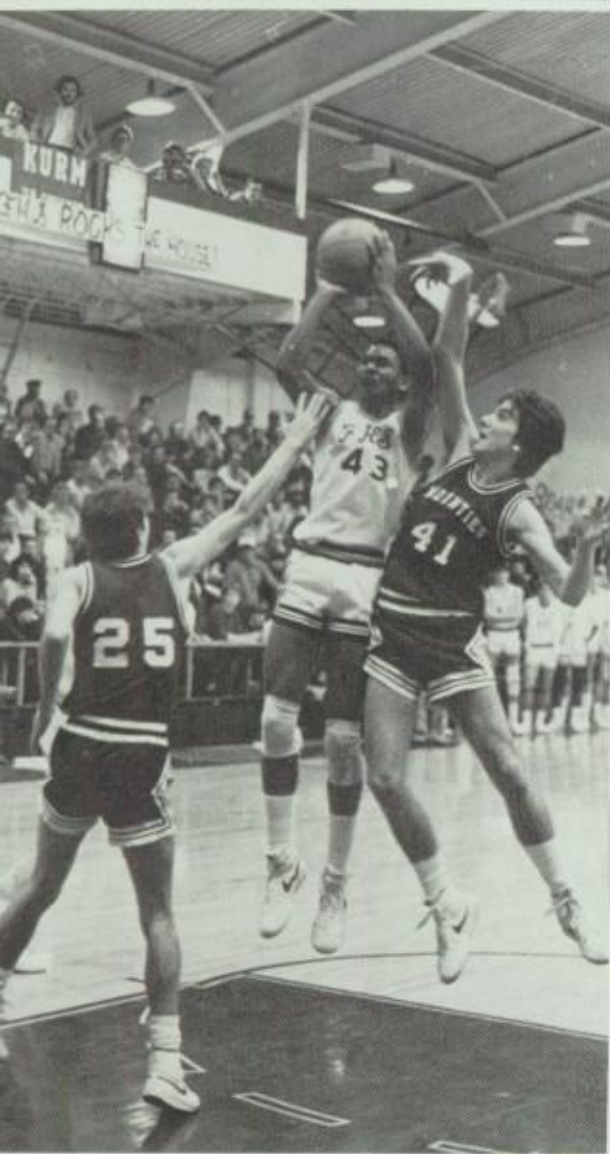

Drill team members, such as Melanie Jordan, did their share to support Bulldog spirit.

Tammy Trollinger and Eva Bryant show that gymnastics isn't all hard work; there is sometime for friends to play.

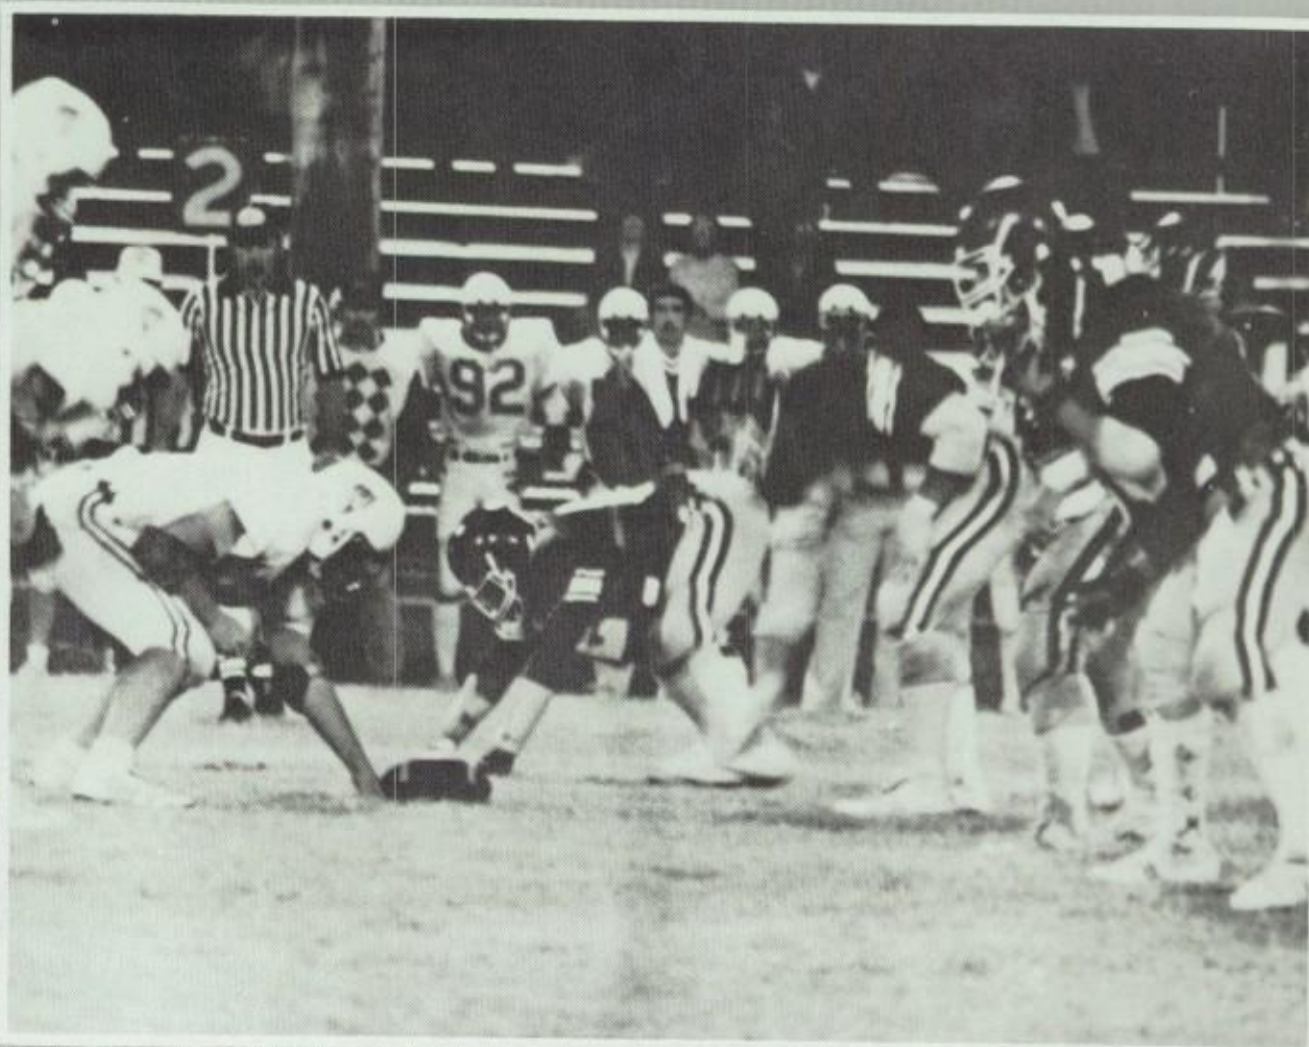

FHS fans have always been a driving force behind the team, and this year's loud, loyal, and supportive crowd was no exception.

Junior Woodie McGary shrugs off a Rogers Mounty as he goes up for two.

Purple Dogs prepare to go nose to nose with the Russellville Cyclones.

Senior player Mike Rogers shows Springdale who is really number one.

Sports

What do you call a spectacular football team, outstanding girls and boys basketball squads, and a 1st place cross country team? Bulldog Sports, of course. Bulldogs triumphed in all fields of sports this year. The football season was one we'll all remember, with the ultimate high being the Fayetteville-Springdale game. Milton Burke's cross country team had another incredible season. It has become almost a tradition to find the cross country Bulldogs on top at the end of the season. A winning season for both basketball teams was no surprise after years of such seasons. While some of the sports seasons hadn't started at the time of this writing, all had positive feelings about their upcoming seasons.

Teams weren't the only ones that had a great season; this year's fans were remarkable, too. Bulldog Spirit was very evident. Win or lose, all Bulldog teams were . . .

Onward Bulldogs!

Onward Bulldogs was an understatement this year when referring to the FHS football team. With a 9 and 2 record, this past year was much more than a winning season. The Purple Dogs had great statistics with only 7 points scored against them in the first half of a game, and only 39 to their 248 points scored throughout the season. As the year progressed and the Dogs kept winning, they worked their way up the ranking charts, and with only one game remaining, they were number two in the state. After the regular season, the Bulldogs ended up being second in the conference. This position gave the Dogs the chance to travel to the state play offs. Texarkana was the first stop for Fayetteville, where they played a terrific game, but couldn't quite overcome the Razorbacks. Even with the team's last two losses, they finished the year ranked eighth in the state, a fantastic finish for a fantastic team.

Although the year was built by a team effort, there were many outstanding players who were recognized over and over again. Some of these senior players were Spencer Armstrong, Jeff Grube, Marvin Singelton, Calvin Sharp, and Mike Rogers. Without these people on the team Fayetteville might never have made it to the top.

In the end, the 1984 Purple Dogs will go down in history as one of the best years in football ever.

Staying At The Top

The 1984-85 Bulldog basketball season was nothing less than spectacular. The Bulldogs opened the season ranked #1 by the Associated Press and a favorite to win the 4-A West conference. They started by winning ten straight games; two impressive wins came at the hands of Little Rock Catholic, and Tulsa Bishop Kelly. The dogs then ran into a mid-Christmas slump, losing their only two games of the year to a hot Little Rock McClellan team and a fired-up Fort Smith Northside team.

FHS pulled together just in time to sweep the Coffeyville Interstate Classic, in which teams from Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas were represented. The Dogs continued their winning streak in probably the most exciting game of the year, beating archrival Springdale on a twenty-foot shot at the buzzer, shot by George Sitkowski.

Much of the season's success had to be attributed to the seniors. Kevin O'Connell, an 'all around' player, was not only a quick defensiveman, but also could break the toughest presses. Clint Blew provided sound, consistent defense also, but most notably was relied upon to find the gaps of the stingiest zones. Tommy Jenkins filled the dogs inside force, blocking shots, dunking, and all.

Along with the seniors was a strong core of underclassmen. Two juniors, Woody McCrary and George Sitkowski, were added strengths, along with one sophomore who was already being touted as 'one to watch,' Sean Sutton.

A good way to sum up the season might be in the words of senior Clint Blew. When asked how he felt about being #1, he replied, "We just hope we stay there." Well, rest assured, rankings of not, the Dogs were #1 in the hearts of FHS fans in '85 and always.

Enchanted Evening

Colors Week was one of the most exciting weeks of the year. It all started Monday during activity period when the Colors Day Court was announced: Queen Karen Renegar, Maid of Honor Gail Streigler, First Maid Laura Dill, Second Maid Michele Hays, and Third Maid Missi Young.

The excitement continued to build until Friday night when the Bulldogs took on Springfield's Glendale. The Bulldogs lived up to everyone's expectations and rolled over Glendale 62-48. Halftime ceremonies included the drill team, cheerleaders, the royalty and their escorts, and the final crowning of the queen.

After the game, the annual Colors Day dance, sponsored by 26 Club, was a smashing success. The Dealers performed and gave an exciting end to an exciting week.

A Family Spirit

The Lady Bulldogs with the leadership of six varsity seniors, have had an exciting season. Second year head coach Mary Frances Daugherty attributes their success this year to hard work, practice, and determination. But as seniors Gail Striegler and Leigh Anne Yeargan agree, it was too good coaches and the closeness of the team with the coaches.

With six seniors as well as several talented juniors and sophomores, the Lady Bulldogs had incredible strength. This allowed them to substitute freely, trying new combinations in the starting line up and later in the game.

Coach Daugherty has seen this year's seniors grow and improve throughout the past three years. The motto for this year was family first, and it typified this year's closeness and family spirit. As Coach Daugherty said, "They play for each other, not for the individual glory." The seniors explain it, "We've played together so long, some of us for more than five years, we know what the other people on the court are going to do- before they do it- this really helps."

Overtimes and tied games in the final seconds were common. As of this writing, their record was 18-5. The team did not live up to some of the goals they set at the beginning of the year, but the Conference and State meets had not taken place. "For this team to live up to it's full potential, they would have to win the finals of State," said Coach Daugherty.

Senior Irene Larson will be relied upon heavily next year as seniors graduate.

J.V. Leave Their Mark

The Junior Varsity Lady Bulldog basketball team, under the leadership of coaches Mary F. Daugherty and Thomas Triplett, had a good season and finished the year with a winning record.

The J.V. Lady Bulldog team was made up of sophomores and juniors who were preparing to go on to the varsity team. They practiced with the varsity and pushed them to work harder. The main aim of the J.V. team was to take girls from different junior high programs and mold them into a team that could play as one.

With this year's promising season, J.V. can be expected to make a big contribution to next year's varsity.

Dedication Is The Key

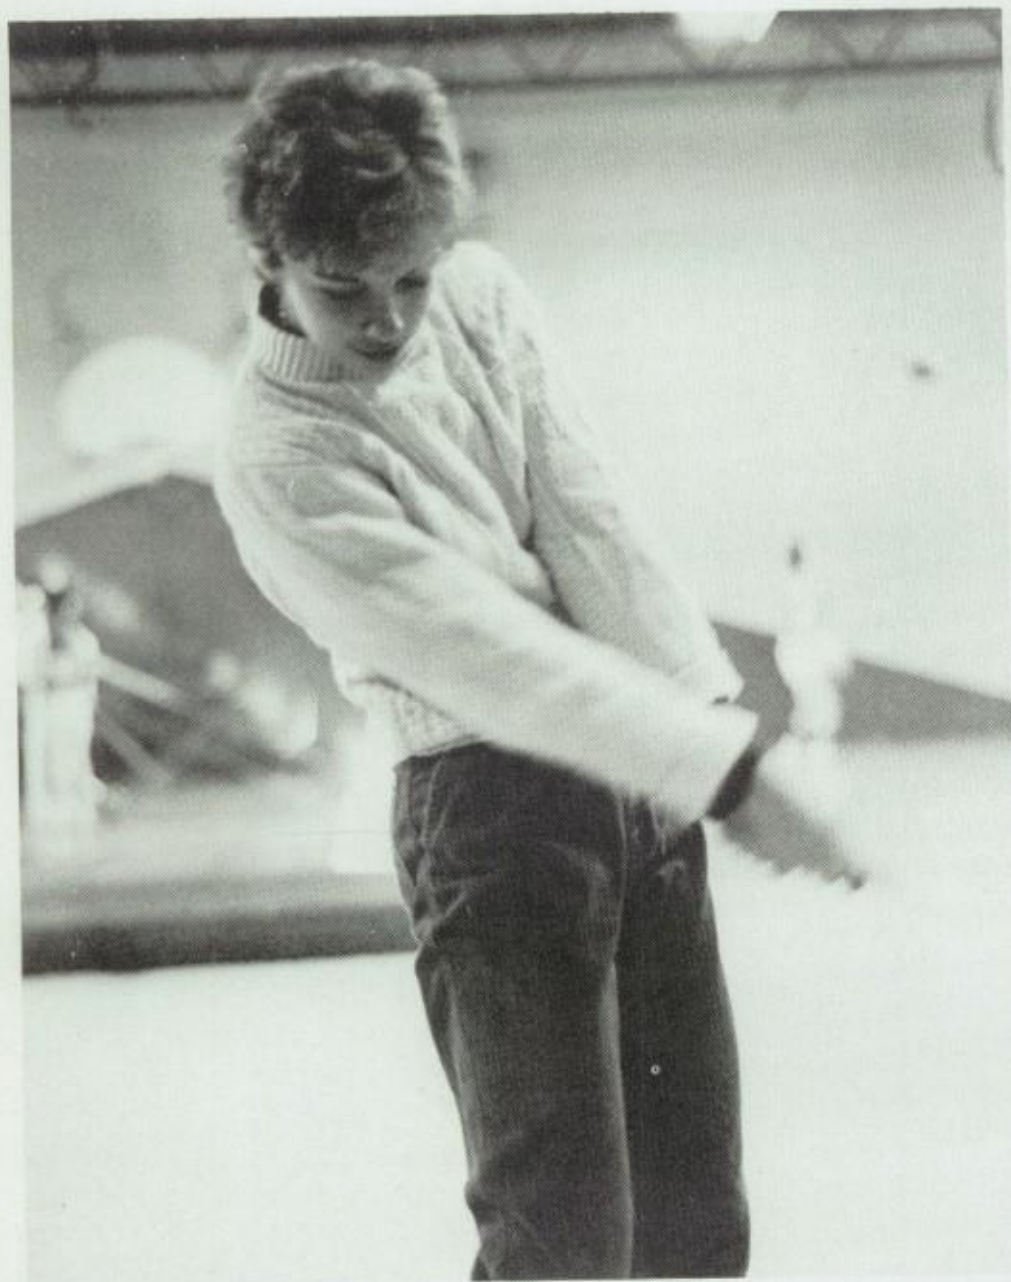

At 6:30 a.m., while most everyone was in bed sleeping, the Fayetteville High Cross Country team was out running their four morning miles. During seventh period (athletics) they ran eight more miles, and on the weekend, they took one long run of about fourteen miles. All this made an average of seventy miles a week. Knowing all this, one can not help but admire their dedication, so their success comes as no surprise.

For the second straight year, our cross country team was state champs, and also for the second year, we had a state individual in first place. This year it was Ricky Baker. Also placing in state individuals were Daryle Evans, in third place, Mike Bolding in ninth, Kelly Alford in twelfth, and Gerald Endress in forty-eighth place.

A Swinging Time

FORE! During the past few years the golf team has become one of the best teams in the state. This year, as always, they were great in competition, and surpassed last year's record. Before the season began David Malone, the coach for the FHS golfers and present pro at the Fayetteville Country Club, thought the team had a fighting chance for the coming season.

Contrary to what you may believe, golf is much more of a physical sport than it appears. It takes arm and leg strength to have a strong swing, not to mention the 18 holes you have to walk. But even with these requirements, golf is one of the few sports in which men and women can compete against one another. Misha Peters and Jody Sweetser were two girls who were good enough to join the boys golf team, and win in competition. These two, along with the other members, made a complete and experienced golf team.

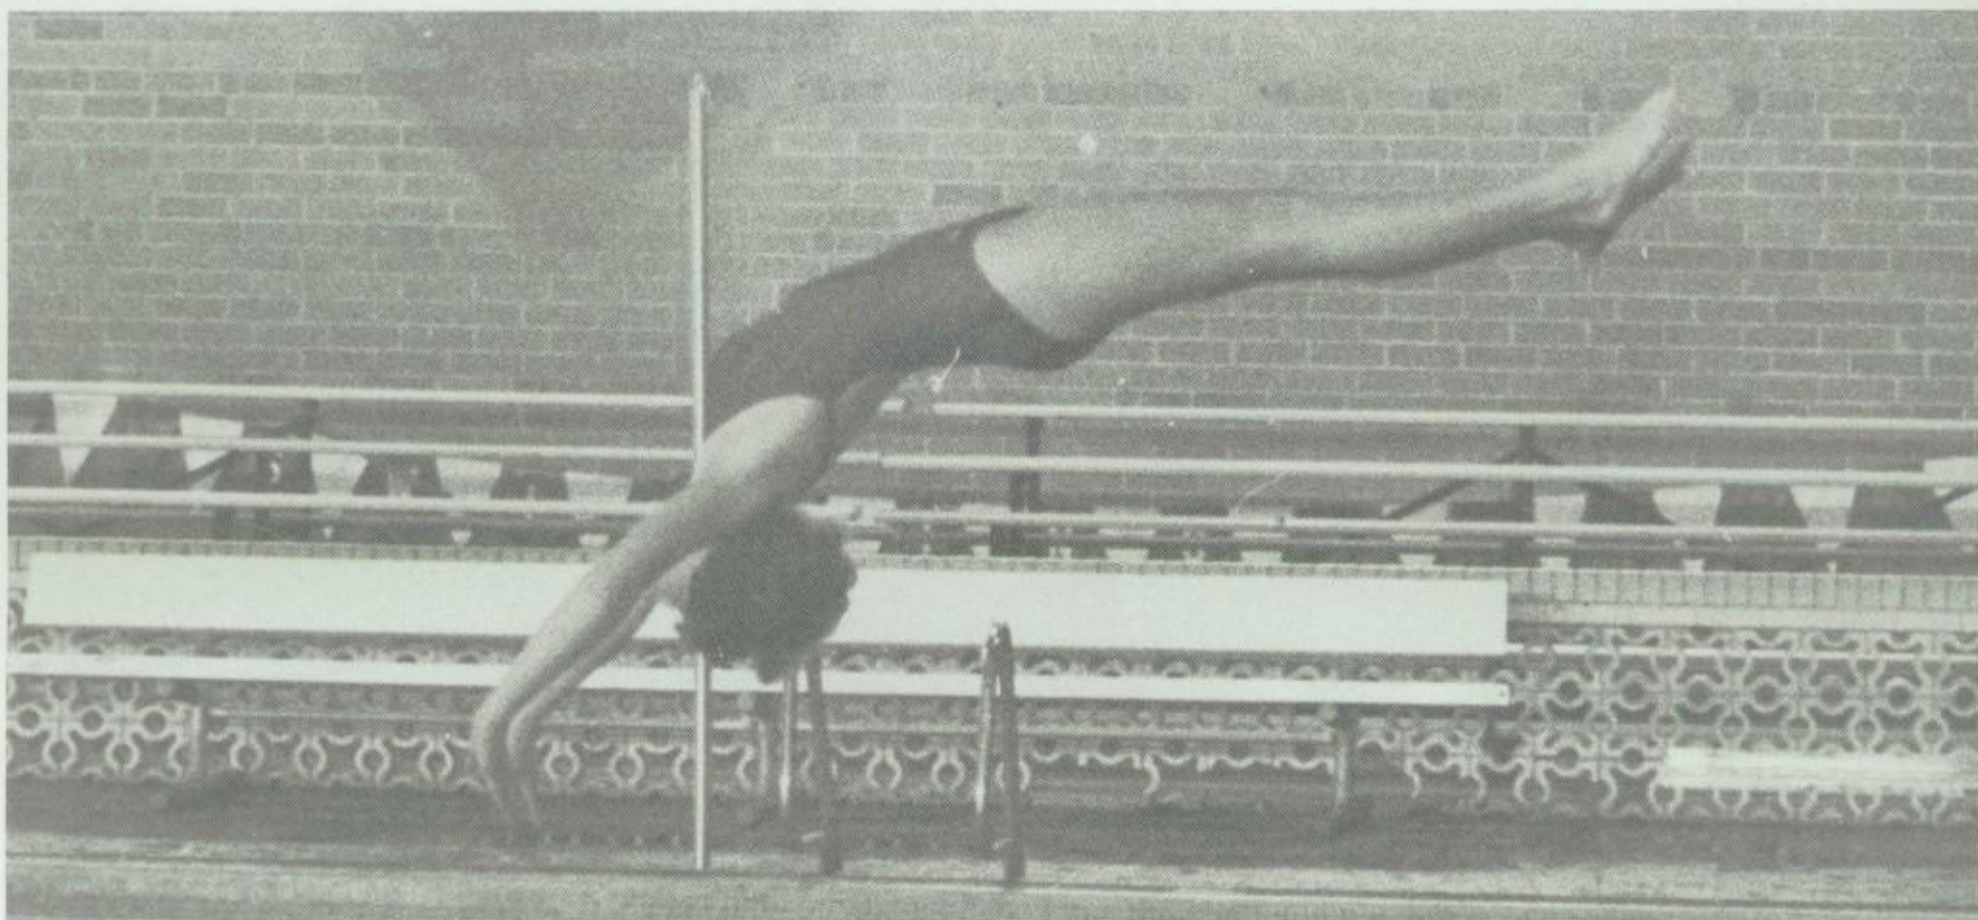

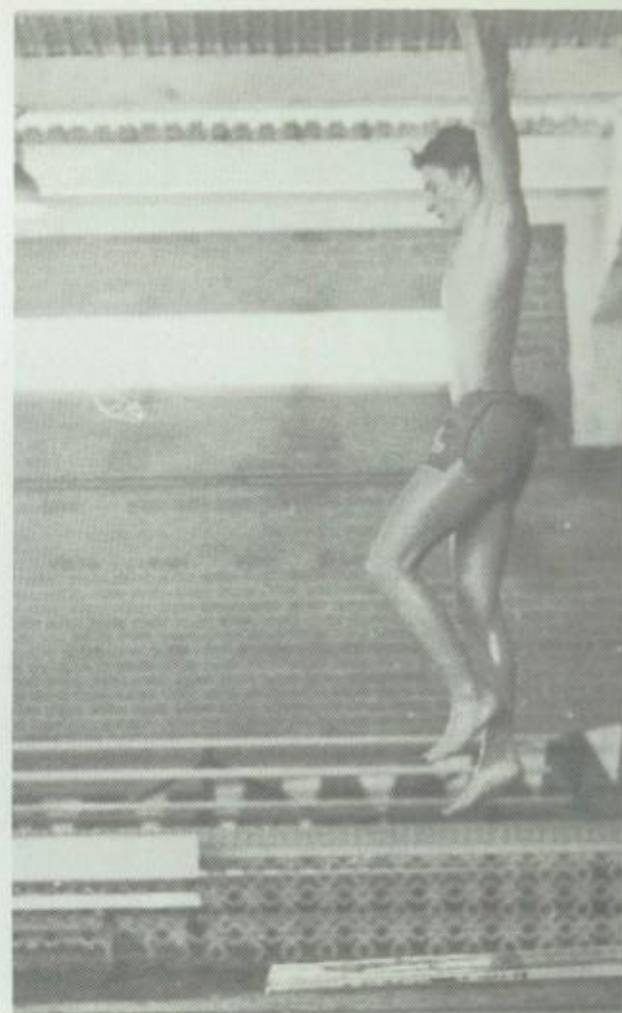

The Spring of 1985 brought good things for FHS, including a swinging golf team.

Practice Makes Perfect

6:00 am workouts every morning, workouts every afternoon, and the longest season of any sport were all part of the swim team's year. With only one month off all year, this was a grueling, yet rewarding year. Swim team members were the unsung heroes of the sports world here at FHS. They practiced and prepared for their meets with as much determination as did the football team, yet there were fewer spectators at all of their meets combined than were at the Fayetteville — Springdale game. As Coach Staab said in an interview with Register reporter Sarah McGinnis, "People don't come watch swim meets like they do football games. The swimmers deserve more recognition." Lack of recognition was a frustrating problem to the swimmers, but not a new one. With or without spectators, you can count on the FHS swim team to continue to give their all at every meet.

Hundreds of "Leave it to Beaver" reruns were lost to these tough afternoon workouts.

Going To Court

The boys and girls tennis teams showed all the signs of having an excellent season. In addition to practice time on the courts, they spent a lot of time working on weights and running to build strength and stamina. The indoor track and tennis center at the University was a plus for the tennis teams. When there was snow on the ground they went and practiced in comfort. The coaches were very hopeful for the best season ever for FHS tennis.

Spring Sprinters

1985 was sure to be another winning season for the running Bulldogs. The girls and boys track teams improved greatly over recent years due to the hard working tracksters. The Bulldog tradition is to be competitive and tough, and there was hope that this year the boys would repeat last year's conference championship.

When this story was written, track season had not opened, but Biff McCann seemed to be enthusiastic about the upcoming year. "Right now we really can't tell how our team is gonna shape up, but hopefully, we will be as good as last year's team and win conference."

In Balance

"Stretch out and get warmed up girls," was an often repeated statement for gymnastics coach Mrs. Sue Carol Brunner.

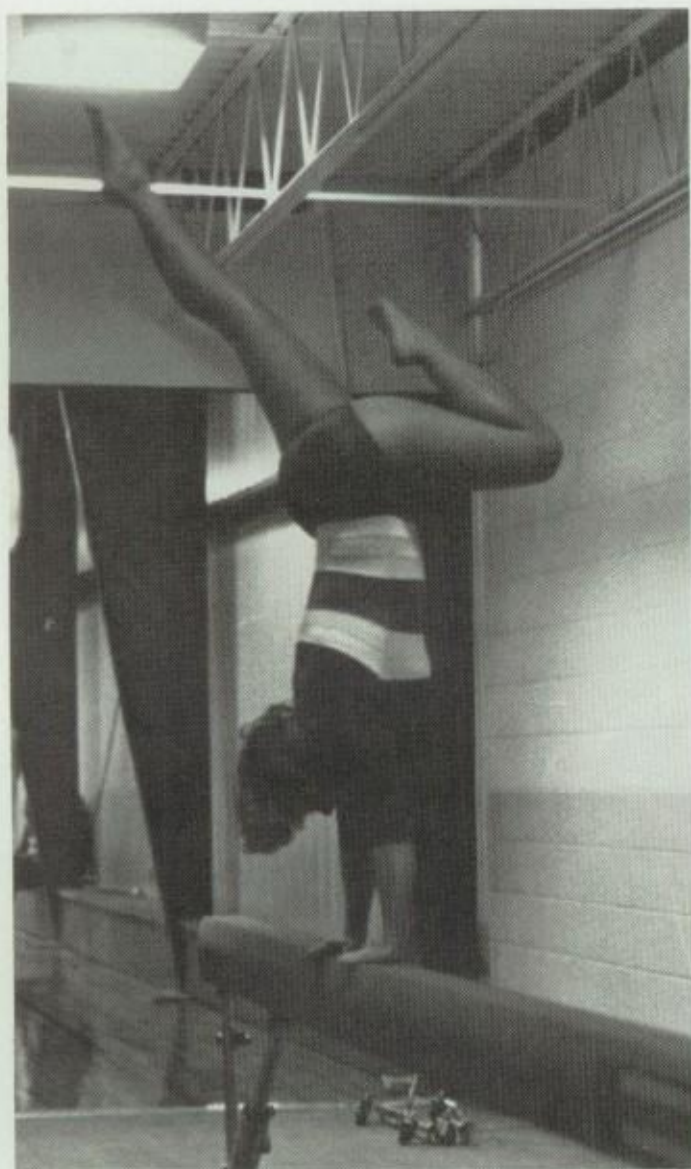

The team was very competitive this year. Putting together a good routine took great concentration and the will to work out and keep in shape.

All around team members were Jennifer Kemp, Kathleen Day, Angie Adkins and Mary Thompson. Tammy Conley, a two-year veteran, was the specialist on the team. Competing in floor exercise were Sherry Brown and Eva Bryant, on the balance beam was Sherry Brown, and on the vault was Tammy Trollinger.

With all the experienced and new talent, it was no wonder that the gymnasts of FHS had a top-notch season.

Building Better Bulldog Spirit

The 1984-85 cheerleaders main goal was promoting spirit. But there is much more to cheerleading than leading chants and cheers. The cheerleaders kept themselves busy by making posters and run-throughs for the players to break through before games. They made spirit boxes and cups and filled them with candy for the players to snack on before games. They made locker decorations to fire up the players and bought them big chocolate chip cookies before big games. They also made each senior player a scrapbook, which they presented to them at the banquet held at the end of each season.

During the summer the cheerleaders went to U.C.A. camps to learn new cheers and chants and also entered in competition in which they won the pompon routine award and the chant award. During the summer they also earned money by having car washes and holding their annual cheerleading clinic. Their efforts help build better Bulldog spirit.

Showing Our Purple Pride

The Purple Pride Drill Team's purpose was to raise school spirit and entertain the audience during the half-time of games.

They helped raise school spirit as they do each year by making posters for games, performing at pep rallies, and making scrapbooks for each of the football and basketball players.

To make the team, each of the twenty-four girls tried out in the spring and attended a dance camp in the summer. This year at camp, the drill team received many awards, including spirit sticks, routine trophies, and many individual ribbons.

Mighty Dog

Though no one has ever been sure who picked out the bulldog for our mascot, the reason why was obvious. It represented the strength, power and stubbornness for excellence of our student body. Through the years the dog has been honored, and has continued to be an appropriate symbol for our outstanding school. This past year was no exception.

You found that not only was the dog an attendant at athletic events, but also became an everpresent part of every school day. Jackets, notebooks, sweatshirts, and even our lunch trays proudly displayed the mighty mascot. Saying, "Meet me at the Bulldog" was a familiar phrase before lunch; and most of us had a stop at the Royal Dog Bookstore at least once a day.

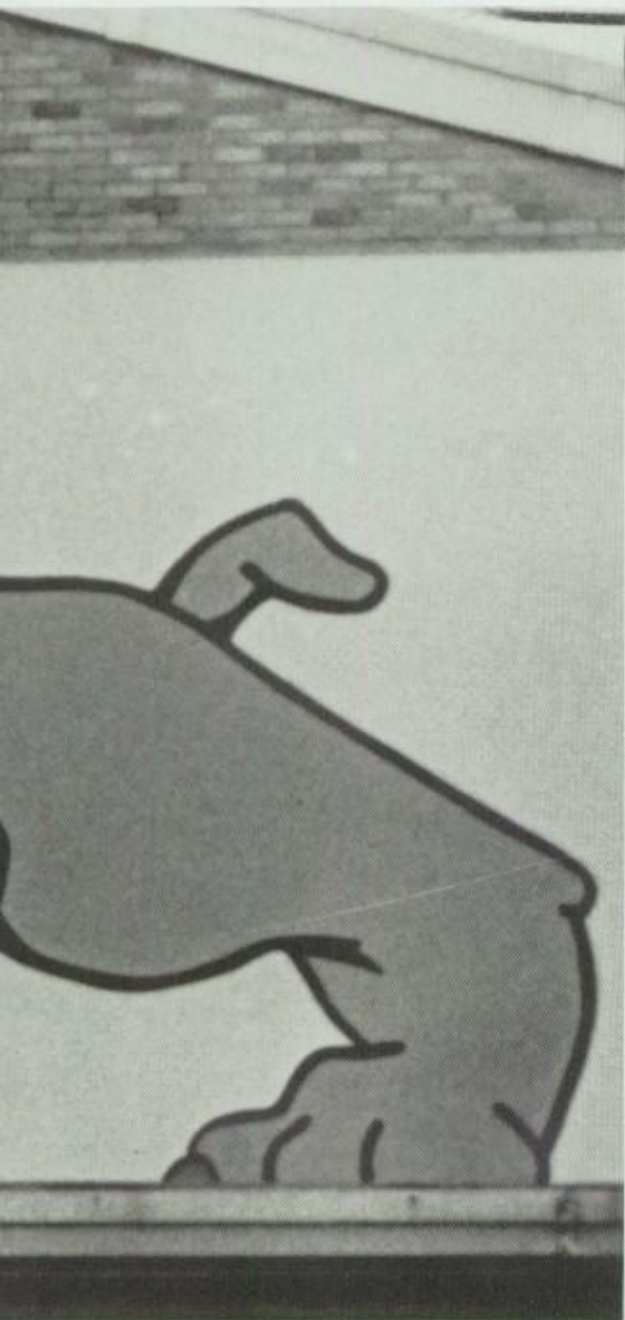

Along with these old familiar symbols, came two new additions to our bulldog family. First of all, during the summer was added a billboard-sized painted bulldog on the front of the gym. And later, we found that our dancing bulldog had become a break-dancing bulldog who cheered on our dogs with a new variety of moves like no other had done before.

And as the bulldog has rallied in the past, it will reign for many years to come. So we, the students, will look back and remember with pride our years at FHS, never forgetting the mighty dog.

The Bulldog Brawl

Traditions - there were quite a few at good old FHS. But probably the biggest one to top the list was our competitive rivalry with Springdale. Some called it a feud.

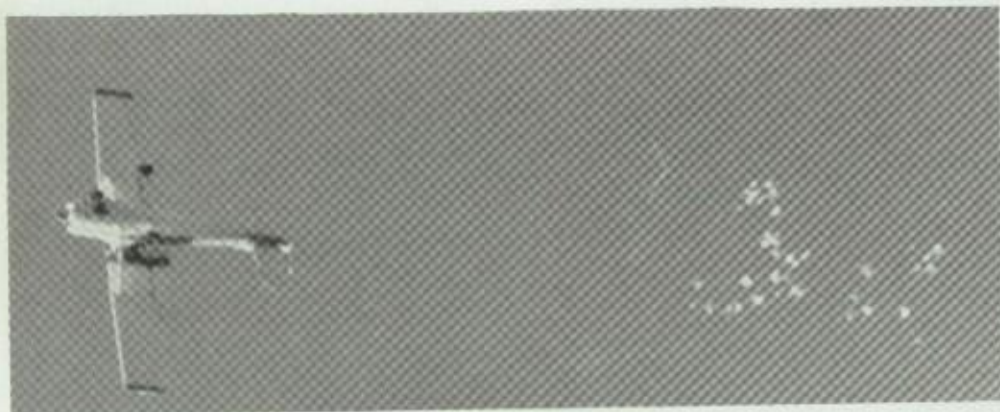

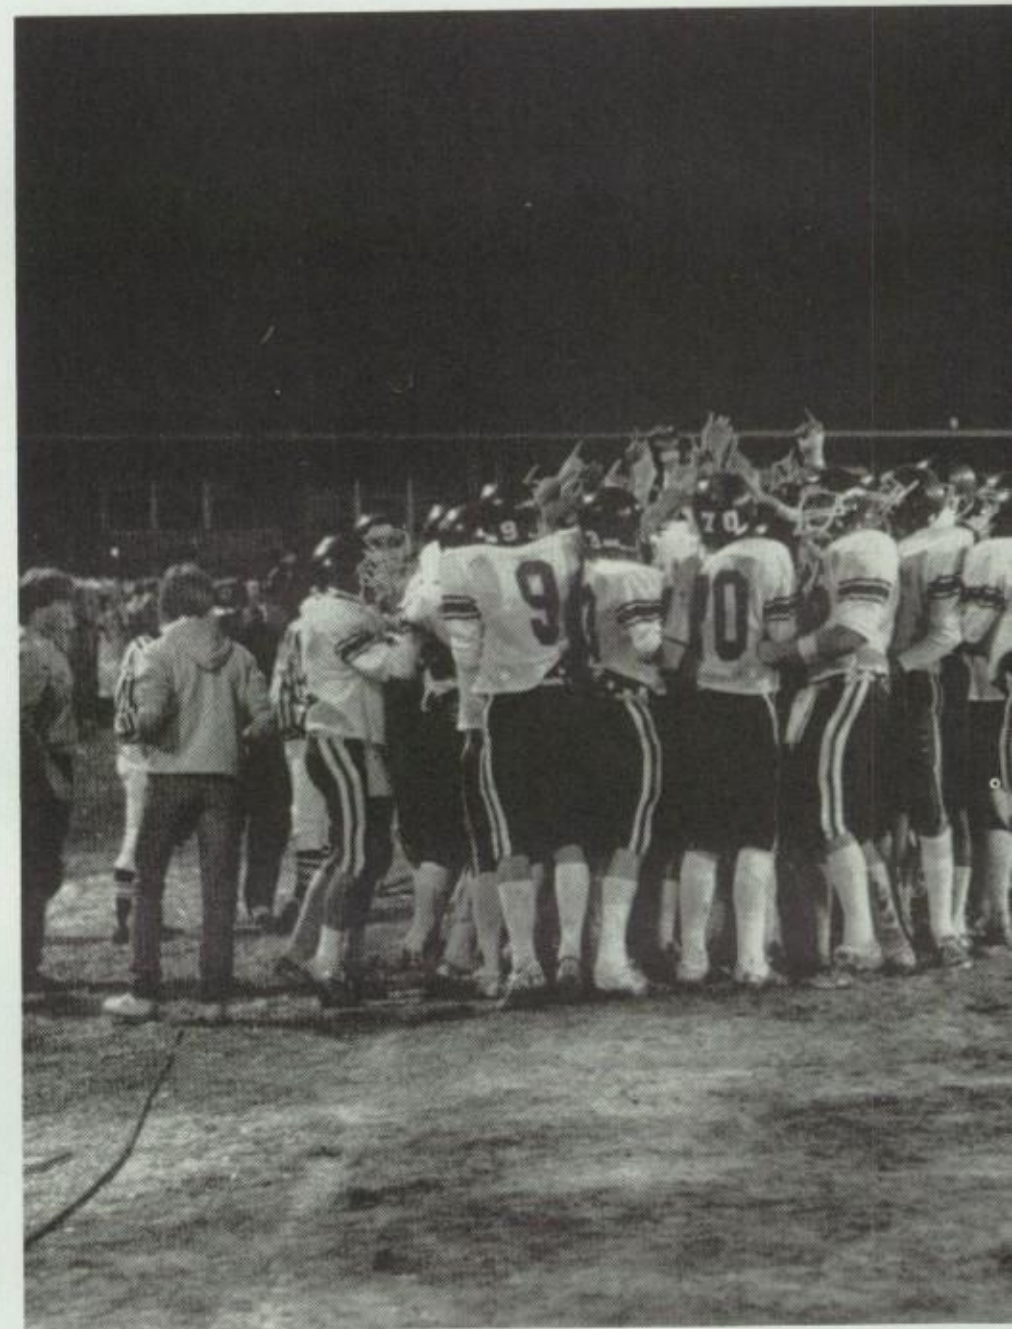

Who was the better bulldog? By some luck of the draw, (or maybe somebody way back when knew something we didn't) the two cities, barely two miles apart, would up with the same mascot - the almighty bulldog.

The year's first conflict in the feud came on November 2 with the Fayetteville vs. Springdale football game. And what a game it was. Springdale was ranked first and Fayetteville second in the state at the time. It was the first time in years Fayetteville really had a good chance to put Springdale in it's place. Emotions ran high all week and the school was nearly bursting it's seams on Friday, the immortal "Purple Marshmallow Drop" day. The Springdale stadium was literally packed as fans braved the chill to cheer the best bulldog on. The game was played live on TV and many used their VCRs to record this moment for posterity and to refer back to on some, hmm, rather questionable calls. But, whether the will of the gods or what, Fayetteville's victory was not to be. Springdale won 13-10. Fayetteville fans left hoarse and numb.

The purple dog's revenge came when the Springdale vs. Fayetteville basketball game rolled into town. There was not much preamble or worry by fans on Fayetteville's behalf-we were ranked 5th in the state and Springdale wasn't even ranked. Fayetteville fans expected a blowout. We were shocked. Springdale played one of it's hardest games of the year.

They also brought quite a few fans. But mighty Fayetteville was not to be shown up, especially on their own turf. We had a packed gym and our fans made quite a din, especially in the final seconds. Springdale had managed to lead by one with five seconds left on the clock. We got the ball across the line and called time out. With three seconds left ... the ball was thrown in and passed to sophomore George Sitkowski. He shot ... and whoosh! Fayetteville won by one with no time left. Quite a thriller; our whole student section was on the floor within five seconds. Judging from Fayetteville-Springdale meetings in 84-85, they can't get much more emotional and exciting.

It was not what the weather man predicted but Springdale got some rain Friday, November 2, at noon — purple marshmallow rain that is.

Final Curtain Call

It would be impossible to list all the events that made 1984-85 a memorable year, but of course there were those that must be mentioned. It goes without saying that the often talked about Fayetteville—Springdale games will be long remembered. Milton Burke's Cross Country team had another unparalleled year, though it was only to be expected considering the excellent coach and team members.

Academics also helped individualize the year. For the first time there was a computer science course that applied math and science skills in today's fast growing computer world. The entire nation learned of our academic excellence when Mr. Bill Merrifield received the National Science Teacher Award. As usual, our bands, choirs, and orchestra were outstanding. They all had members in the All-Region and All-State groups.

As for the world in general, we saw the re-election of President Ronald Reagan as he defeated Democratic candidate Walter Mondale. We were saddened and shocked by the deaths of Indira Gandhi, Jon-Erik Hexum, and Dennis Wilson. Somehow we all managed to survive another year of Cabbage Patch Mania and literally had to survive a bitter cold winter.

The AMETHYST also managed to survive another year; contributing what we hope will be an enjoyable and memorable yearbook. This year's book was truly a team effort, with each staff member sacrificing many Saturday mornings, Sunday afternoons, and even part of Christmas vacation to meet deadlines. While no one person was responsible for everything, there was one person who mothered us, scolded us, and spent many nights checking layouts instead of sleeping: Mrs. Susan Akin. Her infinite patience with our chaotic and pleasantly obnoxious group was deeply appreciated, but not often emulated.

But putting advisors, yearbooks, sports, and academics aside, the most important factor of 1984-85 was you. You, the students of FHS, proved our statement that FHS is ... A CLASS ACT.

Even folks from south of the border support the 'Dogs.

Senior Steve Roth takes a snooze on a relaxing Sunday afternoon.

ngile, elto Beem great knowing you! I hope to see you next year. Stay sweet. Keep in touch!
 I'm really glad to have met you this year. Sulas.

What did you say, Will?" seems to be Mrs. Cassandra Stone's reaction to one of Will Hubbard's comments.

Senior Jennifer Pinkerton catches a few "good vibrations" from her Sunkist and Tortillas.

It's always fun to have a friend in study hall. Sophomores Liz Miller and Shannon Smith catch a quick chat behind the study hall teacher's back.

Journalism advisor Susan Akin stashes the cash for an excited yearbook buyer.

Angela

Wassday! This year has been unusual! We've been through alot. Alto been spect! (skipping! etc.)
Upive been a totally terrific friend! al can't wait till next year! We're gonna have a blast next year!! Have fun this summer! (or better we having fun up!!) But if we don't see up. Always remember me. Can't ill always remember you?
our great friendship! →
G BY!!! 3/3!!! See ya Renee'

Angela,

The school year is finally over & time for me to say "good-bye". Have fun next year! Sorry we didn't get a chance to know each other better. You seem like a nice person. STAY THAT WAY!! Hope to see you some this summer.

7/7

Love,
Melissa

another kind of fellow. K-O!

Best Buddies!!!

Friends!!!
Forever...

Remember!
Sean!
Ha! Angela
no?
Awome!!! & taeo man!!!

Angela.

Well, I don't really know what to write. We've been friends for so long. Things just can't change now - we've been through so much together. You're such a good friend to have & if things change now, I'll kill you - Just kidding. I hope you and Mike get your problems worked out. Maybe someday the two of you will really get along well. I wish we lived closer together - it'd make things much easier. I hope you have a great time in Europe this summer - I'll be thinking about you trying to understand what everyone is saying to you. I hope Kelly & I manage to stay together so you can be my maid of honor. You'll be the first one I call when the big day comes. No matter where you live! You're the best friend I've ever had. Your mom & Netta have been so good to me. It's like y'all are my second family. You all mean a whole lot to me. Whenever I need anything I'll come to y'all first. You know you can do the same for me & my parents too! I hope everything works out for you in the future - it should. You're a great gal! With all the friends you've made I hope you end up doing the right things - including with me. I'm no exception. You mean a lot to me & through whatever we go through I know we'll stick together. Our relationship is strong enough to last anything!
